

British Troops Fight Blazing Gunbattle With Guerrilla Snipers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops fought a blazing gunbattle with guerrilla snipers at the Irish Republic border Tuesday while huge funeral crowds elsewhere mourned the deaths of five Roman Catholics killed by army gunfire.

Deaths of two more victims of violence raised the fatality toll in this troubled British province to 135 since the wave of strife began in 1969. One victim was a 26-year-old man who was gagged, blindfolded and shot through the head—apparently by an execution squad of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The other died of bullet wounds inflicted in a weekend gunfight.

British army headquarters said snipers from across the border fired on troops preparing to blow up a frontier road to cut down arms smuggling from the neighboring Irish Republic. A spokesman said the soldiers fired back in a 45-minute skirmish and reported two of the snipers appeared to be wounded.

In Dublin, the Irish government denied that the fire came from the republic's territory. Justice Minister Desmond O'Malley issued a statement saying Irish border police were "completely satisfied that the shots were fired on the six-county side and none was fired from County Donegal."

In the border-area town of Newry, where soldiers had committed murder by shooting down the men, and urged townspeople to quit selling supplies to British soldiers.

In Belfast, an angry crowd of more than 8,000 watched the funeral of two sisters killed by army gunfire at a roadblock Saturday. A mob attacked troops when soldiers tried to photograph marchers in the cortege—apparently as suspected members of the IRA.

On the political front, about 15 rebel members of the provincial Parliament and Senate met with politicians at Dungiven Castle to form their own rival parliament.

Breakaway leader John Hume told "the Assembly of the Northern Irish People" that the rebel parliamentarians "had lost faith in the government of Northern Ireland . . . The age-old Irish problem is no nearer a solution . . . Citizens are separated from citizens by barbed wire."

As the rebel politicians met, Prime Minister Brian Faulkner opened a debate in the official Parliament on possible political reforms in the north. Faulkner submitted a "green paper"—a government document for debate that could lead to a bigger Parliament and Senate and changes in the way Northern Ireland holds its elections.

The document appealed to opposition members to sit down and talk over a possible "new start" in politics. But most of the key opposition leaders missed the appeal—they were attending the rival assembly meeting.

Faulkner admitted the proposed reforms were unlikely to calm the violence. "I don't believe that any kind of political proposals have any relevance to the IRA," he said.

Castro, Cubans Give Kosygin Warm, Flag-Waving Welcome

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Prime Minister Fidel Castro and throngs of Cubans taking time off from work gave Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin a warm, flag-waving welcome Tuesday to begin Kosygin's second visit to the Communist island in four years.

Castro and Kosygin embraced when the Soviet leader stepped from his airplane, Cuban radio reported, and a 21-gun salute boomed over Jose Marti International Airport.

With Castro to greet the Soviet visitor were President Osvaldo Dorticos and Castro's younger brother Raul, head of the Cuban armed forces. After greeting the foreign diplomatic corps, Kosygin and the Cuban officials reviewed a military honor guard and boarded limousines for the 10-mile drive to central Havana.

Cuban radio said crowds of workers, students and children lining the route "warmly ap-

Commonwealth, AFSCME Reach Tentative Agreement

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Commonwealth and a union covering some 17,500 state trades and labor employees Tuesday announced tentative agreement on collective bargaining.

However, both sides said in a joint statement, no agreement was reached on whether some 4,000 state workers fired from political patronage jobs would be rehired.

Spokesmen from the state and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) said that Ronald W. Haughton, Professor of Industrial Relations and co-director of the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations at the University of Michigan had been chosen to arbitrate the issue.

Haughton's basic assignment will be to decide whether the state is to reinstate some 2,500 workers fired in March and April before AFSCME became the certified bargaining agent and another 1,500 workers fired Aug. 18-20 after contract negotiations had commenced.

UN Gets Ready To Welcome Red China

Rogers Terms Decision 'Unfortunate Precedent'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Nations' decision to expel Taiwan will be respected by the United States, Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Tuesday, but the Nixon administration regards it as "a most unfortunate precedent." And some Congress members demanded retaliation.

"This administration deeply regrets the expulsion of the Republic of China and thinks the precedent is a most unfortunate one and will have adverse effects in the future," Roger said.

Angry Senate and House conservatives urged a cut in U.S. contributions to the United Nations and some members demanded even more drastic action. Others called for continued support of the United Nations as the only hope for world peace.

Declaring "We have a new ball game," Sen. William B. Saxbe, R-Ohio, moved to send the $3.2-billion foreign-aid authorization bill, which contains $139 million for U.N.-related activities, back to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

He said at least a week or two should be allowed to pass to give Congress and the country time to "digest" the U.N. action and its implications.

Saxbe's move came as the aid bill came up for Senate debate.

In moving to sidetrack the foreign aid bill temporarily, Saxbe noted that 42 of the 76 nations that voted to expel Nationalist China and 12 of the nations that abstained from voting are listed as beneficiaries in the bill.

deed be a reduction in the U.S. contribution, which now totals some $249 million a year.

Sens. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., and Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., were drafting legislation to reduce the U.S. payments. Buckley said he seeks a major cut. A spokesman for the New York senator said the measure probably would be proposed later this week as an amendment to the foreign-aid bill.

But other senators cautioned against a punitive cut in the American contribution.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said that would set a dangerous precedent, under which every time a U.N. member lost a vote it could retaliate by withholding its allies.

Defense Minister Michel Debre told newsmen later that "the American military presence in Europe has been and remains an important element in the maintenance of the military equilibrium in Europe."

His statement was a way of telling the Soviets that Paris was not interested in Moscow's proposal of mutual reduction of forces in Central Europe unless force levels were pared in balance and political tensions had relaxed sufficiently.

Warren Man Arrested For Car Thefts

A Warren man was arrested Saturday as the result of investigation work done by two borough police officers, Dean M. Shaduck and Dennis L. Schmader, into two car thefts in the borough this month.

Arraigned before justice of the peace Raymond Gilmore was James F. Gertsch, 27, of 204 Walnut st., Warren, after he admitted taking two motor vehicles. Gertsch was committed to the county jail in lieu of $1,000 bail.

According to the police report, Gertsch on Saturday, Oct. 9 took a car from a Biddle st. address and drove it around town and then abandoned it on Crescent Park. On Saturday, Oct. 23 he was reported to have taken a pickup truck from Linwood st. and was observed by two police officers and pursued on Pennsylvania ave. east to Hertzell st. where he abandoned the truck and was later picked up on Pennsylvania ave. east and taken to the police station where he admitted the two thefts.

Investigation is being conducted by Forest County coroner James Haslet and Trooper Ronald Grooms of the state police.

Men on both sides of the issue expressed disappointment and regret at the explosion of Taiwan. "I believe, however, that to reduce American support of the United Nations would be an inappropriate response to this unfortunate vote," said Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J. The White House referred questions to Secretary Rogers. At the State Department Rogers told newsmen he hopes the United Nations won't be weakened but he pointedly told Brezhnev for the Jews!"

Many of those who turned out to cheer the Soviet leader apparently were members of the French Communist party.

While Pompidou seemed prepared to help Brezhnev gain a diplomatic success on his initial visit to the West, the French president stressed that France remained a part of the Western system and would not abandon its allies.

His statement was a way of telling the Soviets that Paris was not interested in Moscow's proposal of mutual reduction of forces in Central Europe unless force levels were pared in balance and political tensions had relaxed sufficiently.

Supreme Court Declines Review Of School Bus Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unanimous Supreme Court declined Tuesday to review a massive busing plan for schools in Pontiac, Mich., scene of bombings last summer.

At the same time, the court turned down an appeal challenging a desegregation plan for schools in Forsyth County, N.C.

schools in Forsyth County, N.C. Pontiac school officials had contended in their appeal that whatever segregation exists in the blue-collar community is a result of housing patterns.

The Forsyth officials, meanwhile, had complained that their schools were subjected to wrongful racial balancing.

The court made no comment on either of these claims. The flat rejection of the appeals indicates that they may hold no weight with the justices at this point.

In other actions the court rejected unanimously an effort to convert an abandoned public school building in Brighton, Ala., into a private all-white school and ruled unanimously that Virginia cannot upgrade a two-year predominantly white college into a four-year school because it would interfere with the racial integration of the nearby black college.

The operator of a Washington state drive-in was granted a hearing in a new obscenity dispute. The central issue in the case of William Rabe of Richardson is whether police may suppress a movie shown at a drive-in on the theory it could offend passing motorists or neighbors.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police stood guard during a short welcoming ceremony at the airport. After greetings from government representatives, the aging independent Communist and his aides drove to their hotel to spend the night before continuing on to Washington.

After talks with President Nixon and other U.S. officials in Washington, Tito, 79, moves back north next week for a visit to Canada.

The Yugoslav leader, who once was ostracized from the world Communist China and the Soviet Union.

Speaking in a CBS television interview, he said China is gaining world prestige on its own and in any case there is no "unique recipe" for building socialism in the world.

The number of Yugoslav emigres living in the United States and Canada has prompted fears that Tito might end the pontiff's visit to the United States.

In the Pontiac case, U.S. Dist. Judge Damon J. Keith of Detroit has ruled that school officials intentionally promoted segregation by the way they located new schools and arranged school-district boundaries. His busing plan was approved in May by the U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati. Some 10,000 of the 24,000 public school children have been bused since the new term began in September.

In the night of Aug. 30, 10 school buses were destroyed by bomb explosions. FBI agents subsequently made six arrests. Another 23 arrests were made by local officials.

The appeal by the school board questioned whether its failure to counteract residential housing patterns amounts to intentional segregation. The board told that court school authorities had tried to reduce racial imbalance before Judge Keith ruled.

The spokesman pointed out the areas of Kasba, Kamlapur and villages south of Comilla as receiving the most destructive shelling. These areas also were mentioned in the earlier reports.

India and Pakistan have moved into a dangerous confrontation—with armies on the alert on both sides of the border—in their dispute over East Pakistani refugees flooding into India.

The refugees are fleeing continued disruption in East Pakistan, which was torn by a civil war this spring and is still the scene of guerrilla fighting by holdout Bengali guerrillas trying to revive the independence rebellion crushed last March.

In other developments:

—Bombs which police believe were set by Bengali rebels killed at least seven persons and injured 30 in the Dacca area, police reported.

—Well informed sources reported the trial of Sheik Mujibur Rahman, leader of the political group whose success at the polls led to the civil war, has been postponed until November.

Sheik Mujibur is accused of "waging war" against Pakistan.

—President Nixon's aid representative in East Pakistan, Maurice J. Williams, said there will be no widespread famine in the province, only scattered pockets of food shortage. Williams said the expected famine has been averted partly because of the exodus of refugees.

—A World Bank group working on development in India said in Paris the Indian government faces a $700 million bill for caring for the refugees pouring across its borders. The bank group said other governments have contributed only about $200 million.

Army-Backed Government Resigns In Turkey

LONDON (AP) — Turkey's army-backed government resigned late Tuesday night, Ankara Radio said in a report monitored here.

The brief announcement added that Premier Nihat Erim, in power since March, would submit his administration's formal resignation in writing to President Cevdet Sunay on Wednesday.

London telephone operators said exchanges in Turkey were not answering and that lines also were closed from Rome.

A political crisis between Erim's elitist "above politics" government and conservative politicians had been simmering for weeks.

Both sides used Vice President Spiro Agnew's visit to Turkey earlier this month as a cooling-off period and as an opportunity for behind-the-scenes negotiations.

Erim said at the time that he hoped a compromise could be worked out, but if not he would resign.

Focal point of the disagreement was a series of radical social and economic reforms put forth by E

Entry Of Red China Into UN Applauded In World Capitals

LONDON (AP) — The entry of Red China into the United Nations was applauded in many world capitals Tuesday but some officials in Asia regretted the ouster of Nationalist China.

Red China brushed aside all comment.

There was an atmosphere of shock and dismay on Taiwan, home of Nationalist China. A small protesting crowd demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy in Taipei.

Britain, which has voted for seating Red China since 1961, hailed the decision, saying the world needs Peking's help in solving problems. A Foreign Office statement said: "We welcome the General Assembly's decision to seat Peking."

Jamestown Pair Arrested On Drug Charges

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Two Jamestown men were arrested on several drug charges during a routine check by State Police at the Falconer substation Monday afternoon on Route 17 about a mile northeast of the city.

Trooper Timothy Chase arrested Jack A. Smith, 11, of 22 Whiteley ave., and Donald D. Dame, 20, of Fluvanna ave., and charged the pair with two felony drug counts and three misdemeanor drug charges.

Smith was also charged with violation of parole.

Chase reported that both men were charged with criminal possession of a dangerous drug, third degree, after 56 bags of marijuana were found in their vehicle. They were also charged with criminal possession of a dangerous drug, fourth degree, when 28 packets of heroin were found.

The misdemeanor drug counts were lodged when police found hypodermic needles, a hashish pipe and a quantity of methadine and LSD.

Arraigned before Ellicott Town Justice A.E. Harry Johnson, each was ordered held in Chautauqua County Jail in lieu of $5,000 cash bail each.

Other officers elected to serve a one year term are: George Atkin, Jr., Northwest Engineering, president-elect; Harold T. Bright, GTE Sylvania, Inc., vice president; Harry F. Speidel, Speidel-Lesser Agency, treasurer; and Richard H. Danzig, executive vice-president.

The newly elected officers will be installed at the chamber's annual dinner meeting scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 6, at Beatty Junior High School.

New chamber directors Ray Caldwell, Jack Brown, Bob Frycklund, Ernie Miller, Gerald Coates, and Allen Anderson recently elected to serve a three year term on the chamber's board, were also welcomed officially at the monthly meeting by newly elected president Gary Shepherd.

The chamber's board also heard an updated report on the work of the Drug Abuse Committee, the Local Budget and Taxation Committee, and the Ambassadors Council.

Bruce Chadwick, chairman of the Warren Merchants Association, LeRoy Schneck, president of the Kinzua Dam Vacation Bureau and Henry McConnell, president of the Warren County Development Association also presented reports on their respective groups to the board.

Submitted to and approved by the board was a list of nominations for Plus Awards for the year 1971. These awards are given to local businesses who, during the past year, have renovated in some manner either the inside or outside of their places of business and have added to the beauty through this renovation of our community. Winners of the Plus Awards will be announced at a special presentation ceremony scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 3 at 9:30 a.m. in the chamber office. Presenting the awards will be chamber president Merle B. Mitcham.

The board of directors also voted on the admittance of three new members to the Chamber: A.C. Peterson Co., Reserve Consumer Discount Co., and Warren Roll Arena.

Finally the board heard a

"Whoever wants an international easing of tensions cannot ignore China. The family of nations cannot successfully work toward cooperation when a country of this magnitude remains excluded."

An official source in Paris gave this French view of Red China's inclusion in the United Nations: "An act of good sense and realism, both in fact and in law."

A statement from the Vatican said the seating of Red China could aid the cause of peace and justice and was in the spirit of the 1965 appeal of Pope Paul VI for universality in the world body. A second statement expressed regret at Nationalist China's ouster.

Reaction was more mixed in Asia.

There was an absence of comment from most European Communist countries, possibly reflecting the Soviet-Chinese feud.

In independent-minded Communist Yugoslavia, the Tanjug news agency welcomed the decision, saying it gave China its legal rights in the United Nations.

Reaction was more mixed in Asia.

The Philippine Foreign Office welcomed Communist China to the United Nations but said "the principle of universality was not served" by removing the nationalists. President Ferdinand E. Marcos said the Philippines would retain its "fruitful and friendly" relations with Taiwan.

Japan, which has been in a quandary over China policy for a long time, said it will "continue positive efforts" to normalize relations with Communist China.

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato told the House of Representatives that the U.N. decision will in the long run benefit Japan's interests. Sato repeated his position that Japan's effort to keep a seat for Nationalist China was transitional pending a settlement of the Peking-Taipei feud.

Two of Nationalist China's allies in anti-Communism, South Korea and South Vietnam, expressed regret over Nationalist China's ouster from the United Nations. South Vietnam called it an injustice.

But much of the comment from both progovernment and opposition legislators in South Vietnam indicated a feeling that Peking's admission was realistic and might contribute to a settlement of the Vietnam war.

One of his greatest fears, he said, is that the Nationalist Chinese government, once expelled from the U.N., would vacate its 18-acre embassy near Washington and turn it over to the Red Chinese.

"Those people from Taiwan are high class, high type ambassadors and we're glad to have them out there (at the embassy)", Johnson said.

"Red China could go out there to that tree shrouded 18-acre estate and carry on subversion, espionage or whatever."

He pointed out that "Red China armed North Vietnam as part and parcel to their drive toward Communist domination of the world."

The admission of Red China, according to Johnson, is an unforgivable error by the family of nations.

"Personally I wouldn't trust a Red Chinaman as far as I could see him."

Meat-Eaters Beware

Caution! Consuming the contents of this package may present a health hazard.

Have you seen such a warning on the package of meat you picked up this morning from the meat counter of your favorite store? A warning similar to the one appearing on the package of cigarettes you have in your pocket. Or have you read where meats of certain packers are being recalled because they may contain a chemical residue that is suspected of inducing cancer? The way that a dozen of other products have been taken off the market at the direction of the Food and Drug Administration with all the fanfare of a moon landing.

Oh, no! The Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration have been relatively cozy regarding the fact that they suddenly learned that the substance diethylstilbestrol (DES) caused cancer in test mice, forcing them to reconsider their regulations on the feeding of this chemical to livestock prior to slaughtering.

The former limitation of 48 hours has been extended to seven days, and the allowable tolerance in prepared meat has been reduced to zero amounts. The decision concerning the use of the chemical was made October 12.

In addition to being used as a feed supplement for livestock, the chemical is also used by physicians in the treatment of certain conditions in humans. It was medical research that finally came up with the possibility that the chemical was cancer-producing.

While there's no questioning the fact that the decision reached by the two federal agencies was the proper decision, there is reason to wonder why the same "scare" tactics and fanfare publicity that accompanied other such discoveries hasn't been followed through in the DES case.

Certainly the public has a right to know when any food item is determined to be suspect for any reason, and especially when that reason is the possibility of inducing cancer.

However, if one is to check the record of the "startling" disclosures announced by the FDA over the past few years, there's more than a slight suspicion of "witch hunting" on the part of the federal scientists, rather than scientific fact finding.

A Brief -- And Strange Encounter On A Train

(KFS) -- The train moved slowly out of Union Station, a long silver snake slithering from track to track through the yards, gaining a little speed as it passed tower one, old houses snapping by the dining car window like a deck of cards, the couplings squeaking, cars rocking gently. The steward asked him if he would mind sharing his table with a lady.

He looked up, then down the aisle to where a woman stood. "No," he said. "I wouldn't mind." The steward beckoned. As the woman approached, the man stood, the table napkin tapping his mouth. "I don't want to disturb anybody," she said. There were no empty tables.

He saw her without looking. He stared obliquely through the window and saw the fair lovely face, the deep natural wave in the tawny hair, and he saw the little villages and crossings whiz past, the warning bells dropping a half tone as the long train fled from Washington to New York.

She applied herself to the menu as though it were required reading. And yet, she could see him without looking over the top line of the appetizers. He was slender, a man of obvious dignity, with straight jet hair, pale skin and dark dolorous eyes. There was confidence in that face, but there was sorrow too. Or perhaps compassion.

"Excuse me," he said. "My name is Michaels. Howard Michaels. I thought as long as we are sharing the same--" She closed the menu and looked up. "Laura TenEyck," she said. "Are you homeward bound?" It was his turn to smile. "Oh, no. Government workers are good bachelors. We go where they send us--in this case, New York."

"Bachelors?" she said. He turned the fork over on its tines. "What I meant was that career persons are -- is dedicated a good word? -- in any case, better off unmarried and living out of a Washington kitchenette." She smiled and nodded. "Well said," she said. "I'm a bachelor girl, but I don't work anywhere. I live in a place called Maplewood. Ever hear of it?"

"It's like Greenville," he said. "There are hundreds of them." The waiter took the food orders. They talked a little at a time, and then there were the silences. She was spooning orange ice when the brakes were applied and they had a feeling of moving downhill into Baltimore.

Laura TenEyck did not intend to become interested, but she found Howard Michaels to be fascinating. It was his looks, but it was more than that. When he spoke, he petted and pampered a few words and then permitted them to roll off his tongue. It was a fair day indeed and, when they left the table, Mr. Michaels insisted on paying, but she would not hear of it.

He removed his coat and a briefcase from another car and came to sit with her. Laura found herself taking extra deep breaths when she did not intend them. The conversation became a bit less impersonal. Howard Michaels asked a great many things about her, her likes, her dislikes, music, art, books.

She asked how monkish a bachelor's life could possibly be. Why, with all those pretty young things running around Washington. "Not interested," he said. "It's been a long tragic mistake. Half my life is gone and--" "I wouldn't say that," she said. "Why you're not a day over 35."

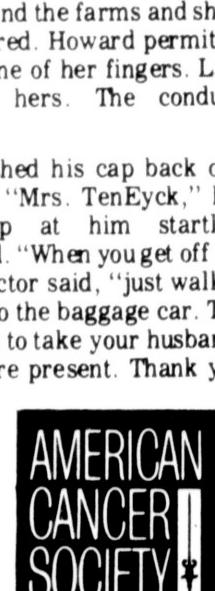

"Fifty-one," he said. She laughed. "Oh, no. Never." "Every day of it," he said. "Lately, I've been consciously looking for a beautiful, mature women--oh, what am I saying? You know what I mean." "I'm afraid I don't," she said and burst into wry laughter.

The train clove the green hills of Maryland and paused at Wilmington and on up through the smoke and muscles of the Delaware Valley into Philadelphia. Howard wanted to touch her hand, those pale translucent hands which remained composed on her lap. But he didn't. She looked out the window and wished that, accidentally, he would brush her hands. But he didn't. "Would it be forward of me to ask if we might see each other again?" he said. She shook her head no. "Then give me your address and phone number. I'll be in New York two weeks. Maybe we can have dinner, see a show or two."

Laura said it was all very sudden and unusual, but she guessed it would be all right. "Not this week," she said. "Call me after Monday. I hope you don't think I'm just some cheap pickup." Howard found the courage to press his finger against her lips. "Please," he said.

The train was flying past Princeton Junction and the farms and shocks of corn were blurred. Howard permitted a finger to touch one of her fingers. Laura did not withdraw hers. The conductor came through.

He pushed his cap back off a sweaty forehead. "Mrs. TenEyck," he said. She looked up at him startled, almost frightened. "When you get off at Newark," the conductor said, "just walk straight up the train to the baggage car. The crew has orders not to take your husband's body off until you're present. Thank you."

Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON -- The families of some American war prisoners have accused the Nixon Administration of manipulating them for political purposes.

The charge is hotly disputed by most of the worried next-of-kin. But we have detected some evidence of backstage management.

In the privacy of his oval office, President Nixon is fretting over the POW issue. As American forces withdraw from Vietnam and turn the fighting over to the South Vietnamese, he expects the anti-war fervor to die down in the U.S. But the continued presence of Americans in North Vietnamese prison camps could raise political havoc in 1972.

The President believes Hanoi is fully aware of the emotional impact of the POW issue on the American public and, therefore, will hold the prisoners hostage for a favorable political settlement.

He has tried every possible approach to Hanoi to obtain their release. He has focused world opinion on the prisoner issue in an attempt to bring pressure upon Hanoi. But it is now evident to the President that the North Vietnamese intend to wring every possible concession out of the U.S. before turning the prisoners loose.

Last July, the North Vietnamese offered to release the prisoners concurrently as the Americans pulled out of Vietnam. But in return, they demanded a total withdrawal of all U.S. troops and equipment in 1971.

Nixon is unwilling to leave the South Vietnamese without the weapons to defend themselves. He also intends to leave a residual force, probably less than 50,000 men, to help the South Vietnamese operate their equipment and to give them logistic support.

PRISONER DILEMMA

This has created a stand-off in the maneuvering over a settlement. The President thinks the presence of this force in Vietnam will give him a bargaining card that he can use to get the prisoners back. But the North Vietnamese insist the prisoners won't be returned as long as Americans remain in South Vietnam.

At a secret strategy session, the President told Republican congressional leaders fiercely: "We are going to end the Vietnam War. We are going to end it in such a way as to get the POWs out. I am not going to have to crawl to get them out. I am too grown up to crawl."

Meanwhile, Nixon desperately wants to hush the issue at home. Any flareup of emotions, he feels, would play into Hanoi's hands. He has sought, therefore, to placate the prisoners' families and to keep them quiet.

The Defense Department has been instrumental behind the scenes in organizing some 2,700 family members into the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. A Defense Department lawyer, Charles Havens, who had worked on the POW issue at the Pentagon, stepped into the non-paying job as counsel for the League shortly after leaving government.

Havens drew up a constitution which seeks to keep the League out of lobbying activities. He claims this is necessary for tax-exemption purposes. The idea, however, that the Internal Revenue Service would prosecute the wives of war heroes is ludicrous. More likely, the constitution is intended to discourage family members from agitating for the return of their men.

More likely, the constitution is intended to discourage family members from agitating for the return of their men.

NIXON AND WIVES

President Nixon has been most solicitous toward the POW families. He has directed his national security advisor, Henry Kissinger, to give them private briefings on the peace prospects. Some wives were invited to a White House prayer meeting, others to watch an Army-Navy football game with the President. In return, here's how he has tried gently to manipulate them:

+ When he needed justification of his abortive raid on Son Tay to free prisoners, he called in the League's charming coordinator, Joan Vinson, and other POW wives to stand by him.

+ After some League wives conferred with Pathet Lao and Chinese Communist officials, the State Department tried to discourage them from presenting the Communist views to the press.

+ There's suspicion that the Nixon Administration had a hand in fashioning the proposals that were voted on at the League's recent convention. The wording, worked out by Havens, appeared calculated to block the militant minority from making the League more active. Those who favored a more militant role would have had to vote to dissolve the League. The convention also swarmed with dashing officers, sent over from the Pentagon, who assisted the wives and, in some cases, berated wives who opposed Nixon's Vietnam policies.

The issue has split the League perhaps irrevocably. At the convention, the bitterness between the opposing factions was so thick you could cut it with a bayonet.

Joan Vinson, who helped to found the League, tried to steer a middle course between the extremes. But she has now been pushed aside by the League's conservative leadership.

The conservative wives, meanwhile, insisted to us that they have not been "used" by the Administration but merely assisted in kindly fashion.

ART BUCHWALD

No Women On The Court

WASHINGTON -- It came as no surprise to most men here that President Nixon could not find a qualified woman to nominate to the Supreme Court.

"Heaven knows we tried," an Administration spokesman said, "and the pressure on the President was enormous. First Mrs. Nixon talked to him about it, then Martha Mitchell and finally Bella Abzug. But it just wasn't in the cards."

"Why?" I asked.

"Well, we investigated it and discovered women just weren't cut out to be Supreme Court justices. For one thing it takes a lot of physical endurance to sit on the court, hearing cases all day long, and our medical people told us women couldn't take the pressure. They have a tendency to fidget when they have to stay in one place too long."

"I hadn't thought of that but it's true," I admitted.

"Also we decided the Supreme Court is a man's world. When the Supreme Court justices get together in private session to discuss cases, they like to tell locker-room jokes and cuss a lot. A woman wouldn't be comfortable in such an atmosphere and it would inhibit the male justices in their work."

"I figures," I agreed.

"Another major consideration was the question of protocol. We had to think what effect a woman justice would have on dinner parties in Washington for the next 15 or 20 years. A Supreme Court justice outranks most people in the government, including Cabinet officers, and it just wouldn't look right for a woman justice to be seated on the right of her hostess. Putting two women next to each other at a Washington dinner party is unthinkable and could cause grave consequences in the social world for years to come. I think Mr. Nixon said it best: 'Presidents may come and go but dinner parties in Washington go on forever.'"

"What other objections did you find?" I asked.

PENNSYLVANIA STORY

Lacklustre Election

By Mason Denison

Barbieri and Franklin County Judge George C. Eppinger are the Republican hopefuls for the appellate bench seats, opposed by Democratic hopefuls Commonwealth Court Judge Louis L. Mandelino (who two years ago sought and lost in a bid for the Supreme Court post) and Philadelphia Common Pleas Judge Robert N.C. Nix, Jr.

One might say that both tickets are "judicially loaded" this year inasmuch as the four candidates are all currently serving as judges in one form or another -- not always the case by any judicial stretch of the imagination.

Perhaps an interesting sidelight on the local election front this year is the fact that a score of Pennsylvania's third class cities are having mayoralty contests -- but of this score, 13 mayors are seeking return bids.

Down in Ben Franklin's village along the banks of the polluted Delaware and out of the realm of third class cities, a somewhat heated campaign is being waged for the mayorship of Pennsylvania's only first class (populationwise, that is) city.

In that tiff, former Philadelphia Police Commissioner Frank Rizzo is fighting to keep city hall in Democratic hands against the challenge of Republican Thacher Longstreth.

The Quaker City shuffle has its interesting and intriguing point in that His Excellency, Democratic Governor Milton Jerrald Shapp has decided to stay out of the scrap and not even campaign in behalf of his fellow Democratic aspirant.

This is a bit of a curious switch from His Excellency's spring primary stance when he endorsed Democratic Congressman William Green in opposition to Mr. Rizzo -- after earlier insisting he was going to stay out of the primary intra-party fray.

Where Do
We Go
From Here?

By James Reston

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The vote to bring Peking into the United Nations and expel Taiwan changes the procedures but not the realities of world politics.

The realities remain the same. China's power rests on her vast population and territory, and not on any seat in the U.N. The vote does not diminish the power of the United States, the Soviet Union or the other major powers, but it does give Peking a new platform, new influence, and new procedures for engaging in the work of the world.

Accordingly, much will depend now on how Chou En-Lai and his associates in Peking react to China's new responsibilities as one of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — whether they accept the vote as invitation to help in the peaceful settlement of world disputes—the main purpose of the U.N.—or whether they attempt to use the U.N. as an instrument of their own national ambitions and of world revolution.

It will take time to get an answer to this question, but meanwhile the vote is obviously only the first of a number of obvious changes. There will be a faster movement now among the nations to establish diplomatic relations with Peking. Belgium did so a few hours after the vote—though this was obviously in train before—and the leaders of many of the major nations, observing President Nixon's coming visit to Peking, will be lining up to follow him.

The effect of the vote will be more important and immediate in Japan, now coming to the end of the Sato regime, and already in the middle of what promises to be a critical election. Tokyo is not likely to move too fast until the U.S. Senate has approved the "reversion" treaty which hands back Okinawa to Japanese control, but thereafter, there will undoubtedly be considerable pressure on Premier Sato or his successor to establish diplomatic relations with Peking, even if this means weakening Tokyo's ties with Chiang Kai Shek.

The U.S. has an immediate problem too with Generalissimo Chiang. Despite all the efforts of the Nixon administration to keep the U.N. from voting to expel Taiwan, Chiang Kai-Shek is known to feel that President Nixon's decision to visit Peking was the critical decision in this whole question of who should represent China. It is understood that he discussed this in the bitterest anti-Nixon terms with former Premier Kishi of Japan before the vote. So the Nixon administration has a problem of how to reconcile its relations with Taiwan and its forthcoming negotiations with Peking.

Other nations have similar problems as a result of the vote. Not only Japan, but the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand, which went along with the strategy of keeping Taiwan in the U.N., are now in the embarrassing position of working out new relationships with an increasingly influential Chinese communist regime.

The Sato government in Tokyo, keeping in mind the importance of getting that Okinawa reversion treaty through the U.N. Senate, agreed to co-sponsor the Washington resolution in favor of Taiwan, despite savage political opposition at home, but other governments now have similar problems of coming to terms with Peking.

On the other hand, the vote eases problems for Washington more than it does for Tokyo and other capitals. Henry Kissinger has just come back to Washington from Peking, presumably with an agenda for the forthcoming talks between President Nixon and Chou En-Lai. The chances are that it will now be easier for the Chinese communists to talk about the future of Asia with Nixon after their victory than it would have been if the President's policy and tactics had prevailed in the debate and Taiwan had been kept here as a potential government of China. Also, the Nixon-Chou En-Lai visit is now likely to take place sooner, probably this year.

Ironically, Nixon, because of his defeat, now finds himself in a better position to go to both Peking and to Moscow and talk objectively about the basic problems of security, arms reduction, poverty, Vietnam, Korea, and all the other hangovers from past wars.

More Welfare Workers Needed To Handle Growing Caseloads

By BOB ROGGE

There are now 1,700 persons in Warren County drawing public assistance funds and there are in the County Public Assistance office but four fully trained and one trainee case worker to handle them.

State Welfare Secretary Mrs. Helene Wohlgemuth said the state welfare department now needs 2,783 additional employees for the "administration of public assistance." As reported in the Warren Times-Mirror and Observer on June 24, 1971, Mrs. Wohlgemuth said these new workers would be part of a new complement of 5,072 requested by the department in its budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Cost of the extra employees is estimated in the budget at $21 million, partially federally funded. The $21 million figure, however, is for a six-month period only. The total welfare budget has set at $936 million for the year.

How would Mrs. Wohlgemuth's request for additional employees have affected the Warren office? We spoke to Miss Marian Sleeman, executive director, at 117 Market st., and she said she wanted three more employees to handle the additional case loads. At starting salaries of $7,407 per year, each, they would add at least $22,221 to this county's welfare budget. It is apparent that administrative costs, on both the county and state levels for the working of the welfare program are as large, if not larger, than actual payments made to the recipients.

The state legislature is also considering a bill that would require the use of photo-bearing identification cards for cashing welfare checks. The person in each household authorized to cash the welfare check would have to present his I.D. card at the bank along with the check.

Another recommendation for the legislature is that welfare recipients draw cash grants from local banks, eliminating the check cashing and the possibilities of lost, strayed or stolen checks. Area banks would receive deposits from the state welfare department to make restitution to the state.

New York State Neighbor Plans To Pre

By PAUL REICHART

While Warren's city fathers continue to stew over the comprehensive downtown development proposal outlined in the once-dead action plan, they might be wise to pause a moment and cast their attentions northward--toward the city of Jamestown, N.Y., where the same fight was fought a couple years ago and things are now "proceeding very well, thank you."

Downtown planning is designed to prevent a death--the death of a community. Warren, in recent years, has shown signs of decline, but compared to the Jamestown of the mid-1960s, it's still reasonably vital.

Gary Templin, director of the Kendree and Shepherd Planning Consultants Inc. office in Jamestown, claims, "When we first started here the city had BOTH feet in the grave."

Prime contributor to the near-fatality was not, as most suppose, the then-proposed Chautauqua Mall. Although the mall has been open for several months already, Jamestown has shown few signs of keeling over from the loss of revenue.

What hurt more than anything, according to Templin, was the attitude of some merchants who were convinced that the downtown must be abandoned and greener pastures sought at the mall.

"We had to turn their thinking around," Templin said. "It was a slow process--most had little interest in bolstering the CBD (central business district)."

"It was like trying to get a locomotive going without any steam."

Late in the eleventh hour of Jamestown's livelihood, after some merchants had already moved away from the sinking ship lock, stock and barrel, the tide began to turn.

Businessmen began to look at the downtown with new pride and a conviction that things could be done to bring new life to the community.

James Byington, who was then social director of Kendree and Shepherd and is now on his own and charged with implementing the development plan he helped devise, thinks one of the main forces behind the about face was Jamestown Mayor Stanley Lundine.

Gary Templin contends that Byington also had a major role in making the people of Jamestown believe in community development. Acting as a sort of "planning salesman," Byington spent many nights talking to this or that civic organization, showing slides and exhibiting maps of what the downtown could become if comprehensively planned.

THE TRAFFIC HASSLE

A primary consideration is traffic. Jamestown is unusual in the fact that the city blocks are extremely short--only 250 feet long on the average. This has complicated signalization, since it is virtually impossible to synchronize lights on a given street, such as East Fourth st., where the cars are being slowed for turning movements every few seconds.

The plan produced by Kendree and Shepherd suggests that every other north-south street in the heart of the CBD be closed to traffic so that the block sizes can be doubled and signalization improved.

Specifically they propose that Pine st., Cherry st. and Lafayette st. be shut down between East Second st. and East Fourth st. They also recommended that East Third st. be closed from Spring st. on the east to Jefferson st. on the west.

In effect, this will create three "super-blocks," each made of four of the former-sized blocks. The unused streets will become pedestrian walkways, much like what happens in Warren every fall during Sidewalk Sale Days when Liberty st. is closed between Pennsylvania ave. west and Third ave.

At present East Second st. in Jamestown is one-way west-bound. The proposal will change East Second st. to an eastbound one-way st. and convert East Fourth st. to a one-way west-bound street.

Currently East Fourth st. is open to two-way traffic.

When this is initiated, traffic will flow in a counter-clockwise direction around the CBD super-blocks. Eleven expensive traffic signals will be discontinued, and the end result will be eased traffic tensions in the downtown area.

James Byington said recently that part of Cherry st. will be closed in the spring and the rest of the center super-block will follow suit shortly thereafter.

The other two super-blocks will develop as parking lot and street improvements allow.

WHERE TO PARK

Hand-in-hand with solving the traffic problem is making more parking available. A lot of Jamestown's on-street parking will be eliminated so that traffic flow can be improved. Replacement spaces must be found.

In devising Jamestown's CBD, the planners considered it axiomatic that shoppers will normally not walk more than 500 feet (one super-block's distance) to a shopping area.

They designed the CBD so that lots and ramps will be either integral to the super blocks or immediately adjacent to them. For instance, existing parking facilities on East Second st. and East Fourth st. will be just across the street from the central super-block.

Other lots will be built at the corner of Washington st. and East Third st. and at the corner of East Second st. and Pine st. if the plan is followed through.

of poorly devised or inadequate traffic and parking systems.

In other words, what good is a shopping mall five blocks away when you get jammed up in traffic every time you try to drive there and the only available parking space is off the beaten track?

Unless you're the type of person that enjoys carrying large bundles of packages long distances, it's a good bet you'll drive the extra distance to the suburban mall where the roads are wide and parking is everywhere.

To revive Jamestown's downtown Kendree and Shepherd plans to correct the parking and traffic problems.

OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

Once the traffic and parking situations are resolved the downtown area should be, for all practical purposes, real competition for the Chautauqua Mall.

Unfortunately, practicality is not always the key to attracting shoppers. As long as the mall is beautiful and new and the downtown is shabby and old, the mall will have the upper hand.

Already some of the storeowners in downtown Jamestown have realized that appearance means profits and have completed work to beautify their businesses.

When the streets are finally closed off, trees, benches and assorted statuary will be placed throughout the downtown area to enhance its appearance and help lure shoppers there.

According to Templin, large trees will adorn the entrances to the downtown mall, lending a closed-in effect to the three super-blocks. Smaller trees will be used to enhance the sidewalk aesthetics.

At the center of the middle block will stand a tall, modern clock tower which will serve as an apex for the closed-in theme. "We want to make the shopper feel totally shut off from the rest of the city," Templin said. "Almost like he has a roof over his said."

To get maximum effect of the "mall" theme, many of Jamestown's outlying businesses are encouraged to relocate in the downtown area. Just like a large suburban mall, a downtown mall must centralize its attractions because it's geared for the walking shopper.

Luckily space is available in downtown Jamestown--in fact it's abundant. Several buildings are vacant; others have empty floor space. The Carnahan Building, for instance, is eight stories high and seven are vacant.

MEANWHILE, BACK IN WARREN

"So what does Jamestown have to do with Warren?" you ask.

Two things. Jamestown is a living example of the kind of thing that has been proposed for Warren in the action plan.

And secondly, Jamestown and the Chautauqua Mall are competing with Warren for the local shopper's dollar.

We already know that the Chautauqua Mall has made a dent in what was formerly Warren's share of the local economy. A dynamic, accessible City of Jamestown will take even more if the Borough of Warren doesn't keep pace.

We're talking now about nuts-and-bolts capitalism; only the strong survive.

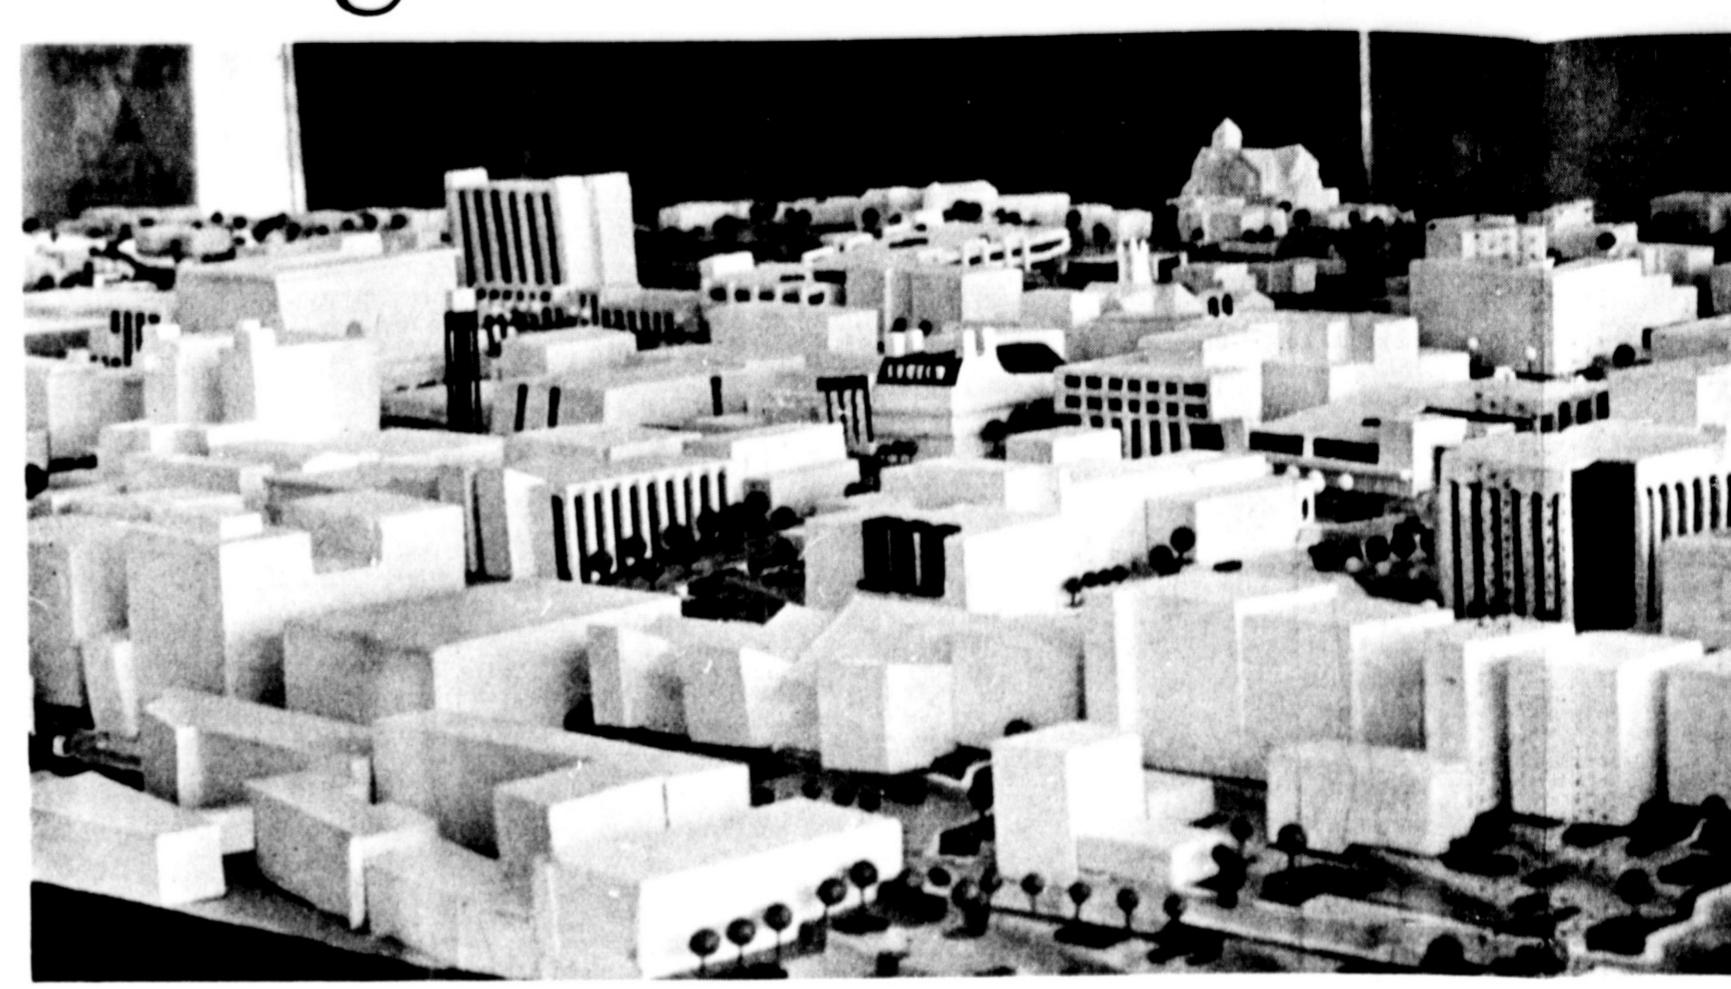

Byington thinks there is enough buying power in the vicinity to keep all three shopping areas alive if each keeps pace with the other. At present, however, the Chautauqua Mall is head and shoulders above Jamestown and Warren.

Jamestown's trying to draw even, leaving only Warren in an economically disadvantaged position.

If Warren is to survive certain changes must be made. These changes can come hit-or-miss with no comprehensive planning, or they can come as part of an orderly, farsighted development system.

The choice is up to YOUR elected councilman. If you are afraid he is not acting in your best interest, then let him know how you feel.

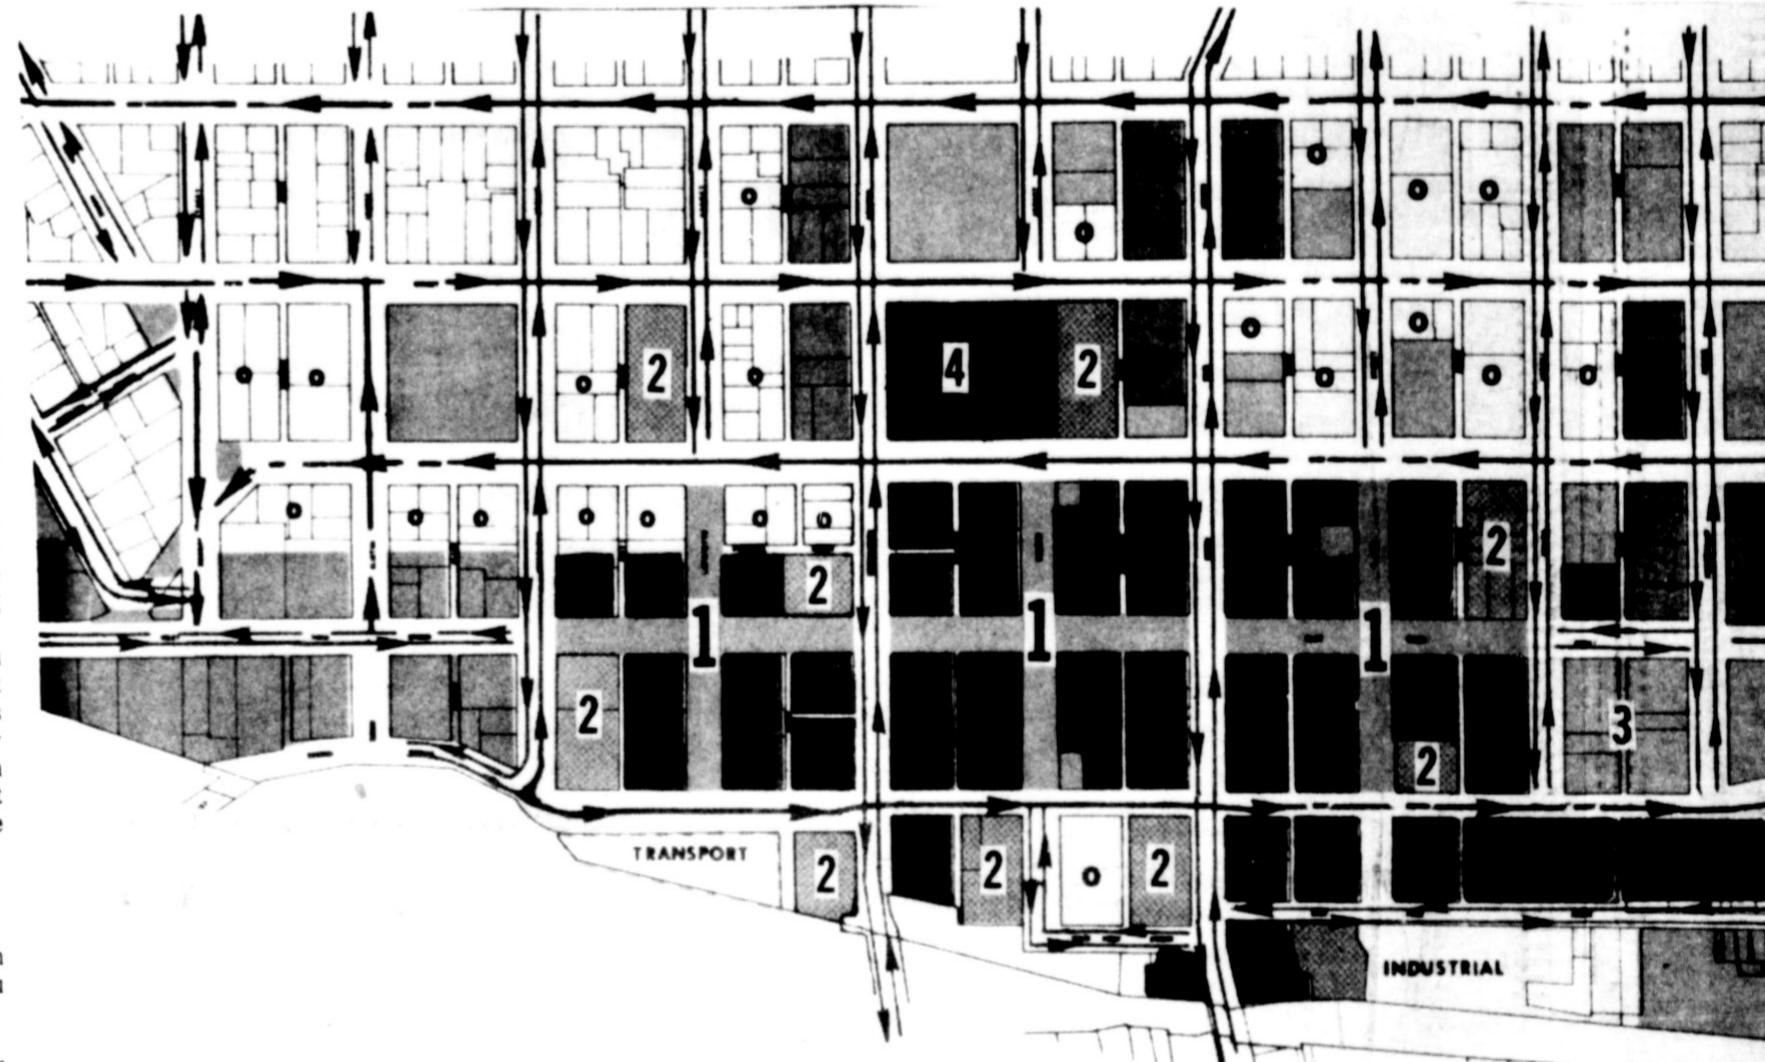

If you do nothing to set him straight, the fault is as much yours as his.

JAMESTOWN'S 'MODEL CITY'

This model of the city took six months to build and depicts what Jamestown will look like when the "super-blocks" are fully developed and all proposed construction is finished. This picture looks at Jamestown from the southeast corner. The taller building at right is city hall. At the top left is a proposed high rise Ramada Inn complex that construction on East Fourth st. near the

PROPOSED THREE 'SUPER-BLOCKS'

An overview of the Jamestown development plan shows the three "super-blocks" (labeled '1'), each comprised of four of the current city blocks. Traffic flows counter-clockwise around the CBD in an one-way street system. Parcels of land labeled '2' are downtown parking facilities. At the northeast corner of the super-block on the right is the Spring st. ramp, which is now under construction. '3' is the new Jamestown City Hall and surrounding facilities. '4' represents a proposed Ramada Inn complex. OBVIOUS SYMPTOM

One of the most obvious symptoms of a dying community is vacant space in the downtown area. The building that houses Carnahan's at the corner of Cherry st. and East Third st. is eight stories tall but only one is being used. In fact, because of space needs in Carnahan's store, the old elevators have been blocked off and at present there is no public access to the top seven levels. The development plan would put this space back to use, perhaps as an apartment building.

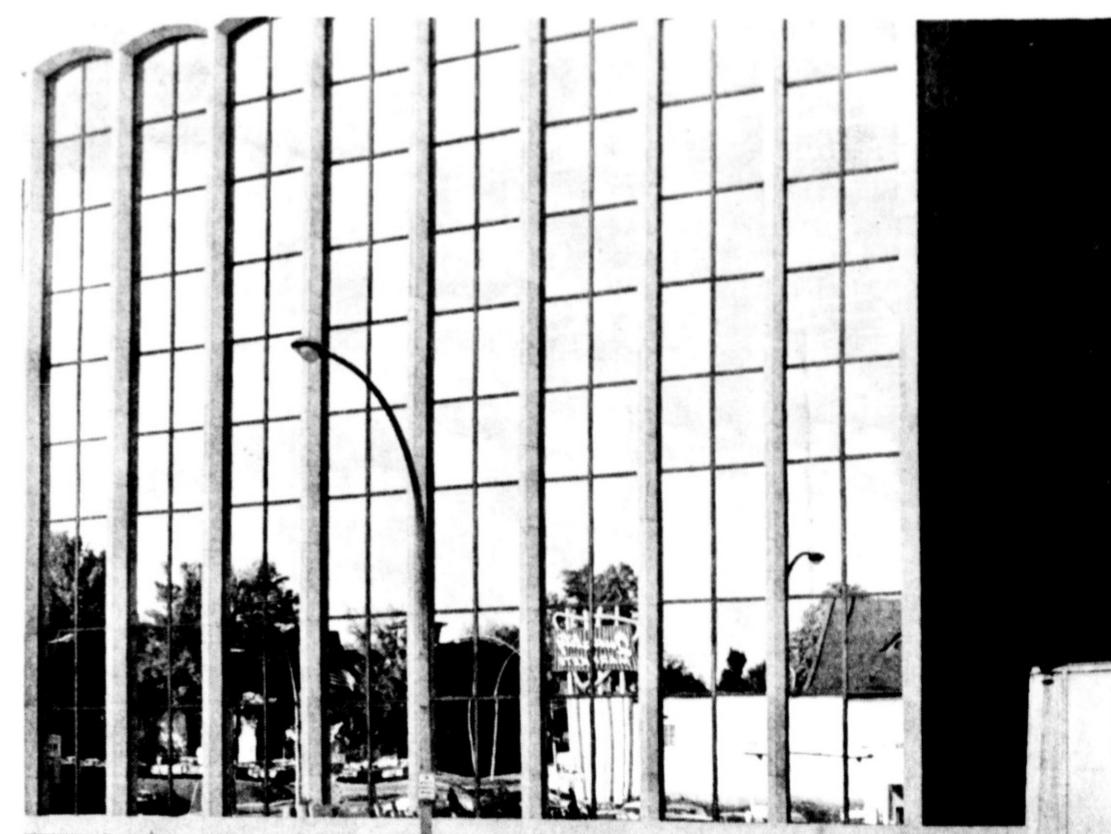

TAKES ON NEW LOOK

People tend to ignore the planners' argument that nice looking store fronts attract business. When these same people become shoppers, however, they flock to the attractive businesses

NEW FEATURE

At the southeastern corner of the city mall development area stands one of Jamestown's most striking architectural features, the new City Hall. The building is now complete, but construction continues on the surrounding blocks so that the environs of the building will compliment its clean modern lines.

PARKING RAMP

Already under construction is the Spring Street Parking Ramp, which will be at the northeastern corner of the "super-block" between North Main st. and Spring st. The ramp, which is being built on a highly valuable piece of ground, is designed to attract shoppers into the downtown mall complex. It could have been built a block away for much less cost, but would have lost its effectiveness if constructed outside of the super-block area.

TRAFFIC FLOW DIAGRAMS

A picture tells a thousand words, and for that matter so do traffic flow maps such as the two pictured here. The map titled 'Traffic Flow Diagram 1970' shows the myriad problems faced by motorists in downtown Jamestown, N.Y. today. Literally hundreds of turning movements and extremely short blocks complicate signalization to the point where traffic tie-ups are inevitable. The map entitled "Proposed Traffic Flow" depicts how the "super-blocks" will eliminate intersection hassles and how a one-way traffic plan will carry cars around the CBD with a minimum of signalization and very few turning movements. The maps were prepared by Donald M. McNeil, traffic engineer.

The regular weekly meeting of the Warren Sports Boosters will be held this evening at 8 p.m. in the Warren Area High School cafeteria. As usual, the main portion of the program will feature head football coach, Toby Shea, who will show films and discuss last week's Warren-Jamestown game.

The November 3rd meeting will be the Annual meeting with nominations and election of new board members. However, this week's meeting will also be opened for nominations to the 11 member Booster board. Members are elected for 2 year terms.

Those whose terms expire this year include the current President, Jim Gibson, as well as Dave Grady, Vinnie Gray, Rich Freeburg, Shurl Glass and Howard O'Neil.

The other 5 members of this active organization's board who will be serving one more year are: Murray McComas, Dave Berdine, John Smith, Jack Tannler and Bill Mervine.

Gibson encourages Sports Boosters of Warren Area High School to attend this meeting and the one following to nominate and vote for the men they would like to see govern the many worthwhile projects of this organization.

Surprise Arizona State Starter Grabs National Offense Honors

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Coach Frank Kush of Arizona

State had a hunch before Saturday's key Western Athletic Conference game with New Mexico.

Sit down for a series or two, he told Grady Hurst, the starting quarterback, and then go in. The idea was for Hurst to look over the New Mexico defense and get an idea of which plays would work.

Hurst, who had quit the squad once before and returned, now has left the team, apparently for good. Kush disclosed Tuesday.

Dan White, who began the season as the No. 1 quarterback but had missed 3½ games with a shoulder operation, started the game and put on quite a show for Hurst.

He completed all five passes he threw in the first period, three for touchdowns. All told, White connected on 12 of 15 passes for six touchdowns and led the Sun Devils to pay dirt six of the first seven times they had the ball. Arizona State won 60-28.

For that performance, the 6-foot-3, 175-pound sophomore from Mesa, Ariz.—who had completed only 13 of 37 previous passes this season, none for touchdowns—was named National College Back of the Week by The Associated Press.

Hudson, Love Tied For NBA Point Lead

Atlanta's Lou Hudson and Chicago's Bob Love are tied for the National Basketball Association scoring lead with 30.6 averages after five games, according to statistics released by the league today.

Right behind them is a new name—but a familiar face. Both belong to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, formerly Lew Alcindor, the Milwaukee Bucks' towering center who has averaged 30.5 points per game in leading the defending NBA champions to six consecutive victories.

Hudson, Atlanta's 6-foot-5 guard, has been one of the few bright spots for the Hawks, who have lost four of their first five outings. Love, a 6-foot forward, has been one of the main reasons Chicago has jumped off to a 4-1 start.

Last year Hudson ranked fifth in the NBA in scoring with a 26.8 average. Love was right behind in sixth place with a 25.2 mark.

Casper Now Eighth

On Golf $$$ List

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Casper's victory in the Kaiser International Sunday pushed him into eighth place in the year's pro golf money list, still led by Jack Nicklaus.

The latest financial figures were released Tuesday by the PGA Tournament Players Division.

Without a victory for 14 months and troubled most of the season with assorted ailments, Casper won $30,000 in the Napa, Calif., tournament and extended his record of having won at least one tournament every year since he started as a pro in 1966.

It's the longest streak among current players.

Nicklaus, who sat out the Kaiser event, tops the money list with $207,080, followed by Lee Trevino, $199,469, and Arnold Palmer, $194,937.

Nicklaus also heads the point standings, based on tournament performances.

Houston Wins Late

Detroit (AP) — A basket on a goaltending call in the last four seconds gave Houston a 104-103 victory over Detroit for the Rockets' first National Basketball Association triumph of the season Tuesday night.

Mike Newlin was credited with the winning basket after the call against Bob Lanier of the Pistons.

It took an incredible performance to win the honor over Greg Pruitt, Oklahoma running back, who won the award in consecutive weeks earlier in the season and broke Gale Sayers' Big Eight record Saturday by gaining 294 yards against Kansas State, and Florida State quarterback Gary Huff, who passed for 366 yards and five touchdowns against South Carolina and scored once himself.

The White name is a familiar one to Arizona State followers. His father, Wilford "Whizzer" White, played from 1947-50 and was the school's first bona fide All-American. He still holds the NCAA career yardage record for all-purpose running (i.e., rushing, pass receiving, interceptions returns, punt returns and kickoff returns plus sundry school rushing and scoring marks).

Young Dan called every play himself except for one Kush sent in. Afterwards, the coach said he "never had a game called that well."

Ironically, White is attending Arizona State on a baseball scholarship and led the freshmen in hitting last spring with a .417 average. He's a third baseman-outfielder.

During the baseball season, he also attended spring football practice whenever he could.

That was a moral victory for Kush, who lost such outstanding football players as Reggie Jackson, Lenny Randle and Paul Ray Powell to pro baseball before their eligibility ran out.

Others considered for Back of the Week included running backs Jerry Marbury of West Virginia, Ed Marinari of Cornell, Lydell Mitchell of Penn State, Billy Taylor of Michigan and Bernard Jackson of Washington State and quarterback Don Strock of Virginia Tech.

OUTDOORS

SPORTSMEN?

What is a sportsman? While I have my own answer to this question, I thought it best to check Mr. Webster and see what his answer might be. Which, it turns out, reads, "A person who can take a loss or defeat without complaint, or victory without gloating, and who treats his opponents with fairness, generosity, courtesy, etc."

So I am definitely certain the persons I am about to discuss are not sportsmen, and at least one of them could be classed as an outright goon. Definition: "A ruffian or thug." Or perhaps an out-and-out simple-minded idiot. No definition needed.

The matter bringing my temper to the boiling point, and insulting the sense of fairness I always considered as a part of claiming the title of sportsman, started last Sunday afternoon when I found a note in my box to call Dave Titus, local game protector, at the first opportunity. Which I did.

The story Dave told over the phone is probably the most disgusting case of unsportsmanlike action I have ever heard in the many years I have been associated with the outdoor world, and the most discrediting to those who call themselves sportsmen ever to come to my notice.

But to the facts of the case...

A group of 'coon hunters from Ohio has been coming to Warren County for the past several years. They usually arrive around October 1 and leave late in November. And, according to Titus who has checked their operations time and again, they are completely lawful in their pursuits, are dutifully aware of land-owner's rights, and pay leasing rights on the land where they establish their headquarters. He classifies them as the type of hunter who is a credit to the sport.

Being the expert hunters they are, they do take a considerable number of 'coon. Which has apparently annoyed some local 'coon hunters, whose lack of success has led them to claim a scarcity of the species, and frustrated them to the point where on occasion they have threatened the Ohio hunters with bodily harm, or the shooting of their dogs.

However, no definite action against the visiting sportsmen had been carried out until a pre-dawn attack on their camp Sunday morning. At which time some goon—and I'll repeat the word "goon"—visited the camp and, wielding a ballbat-blank, smashed the windshield of one of the truck-campers parked there.

This is sportsmanship?

Now if those interested in the sport of hunting can shrug this off as something happening to "some guys from Ohio," and therefore of little concern to them, I'll say they are kidding themselves. It is incidents like this that are putting the whole of the hunting fraternity in a bad light and feeding live ammunition to the do-gooders who are presently mounting an anti-hunting drive that isn't to be sneezed at.

I visited the camp on Monday and talked with Bernard Eddy, a 67-year-old retiree, a dedicated 'coon hunter if there ever was one. He didn't want to talk much about the windshield-breaking incident, only replying to questions asked, but he sure had a lot to say when the conversation got around to 'coon hunting and 'coon hunts.

There's little questioning the fact that 'coons can be pesky critters, as any farmer or rural resident well knows. And Eddy told me that in most cases the areas hunted were at the request of the property owners, or at least with their permission. He was sure, he said, that in many cases their services towards reducing the 'coon population was truly appreciated.

"They say we kill too many 'coons," he said, "but I think you've got to kill a treed 'coon or your hound may get the idea there's no reason to trail." With this I'm inclined to agree. For any hound with intelligence enough to outsmart a sly old 'coon and force him to tree, is intelligent enough to know there should be some purpose to the sport. In fact, I'll go so far as to say that taking a dog away from a treed 'coon may possibly ruin it.

And there's no reason to do this so far as I can see. There's plenty of 'coon in Warren County and if there are those who have problems getting a chase, I'd advise them to improve their hunting knowhow or acquire some better 'coon hounds. Any game protector can read off a long list of the 'coon damage reports they file throughout any fall season, road kills are common, and sighting the animals along highways on a rainy night is the usual thing.

Added all up, I think the attack on the Ohio hunters was an atrocious act, performed by some person of low mentality, and certainly lacking in any of the attributes of the true sportsman. As Dave Titus has said, "The man with a gun isn't always a sportsman."

Edinboro's Offense Rolls Up Records

Every time Edinboro State's band of Fighting Scots step onto the gridiron it seems as if the Clansmen are bent on setting another record.

Enroute to their best finish in 44 years of football, the Scots logged 25 new changes in the Red and White record book last season with some highly respectable marks. Yet many of those standards have already been revised by the Clan's 1971 performers and many more are on the verge of being broken.

Sixteen new marks have been established as the Scots have set records in five of their six games this season.

The interception standard most appropriately fell by the wayside this past Saturday in the Scot's 42-26 victory over pass-minded Lock Haven State. The Bald Eagles' Mike Packer,

Chiefs, Oilers Complete Swap

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs traded fullback Robert Holmes to the Houston Oilers in a National Football League exchange for tight end Willie Frazier.

Chiefs Coach Hank Stram said the deal also included an undisclosed future draft choice for Houston.

Frazier, 6-5 and 247 pounds is in his eighth year. He had his best year in 1967 with the San Diego Chargers when he grabbed 57 passes for 922 yards and 10 touchdowns.

Holmes, 25, was named by his teammates as their most valuable player in 1968, his first year, when he was the American Football League's second leading rusher with 866 yards and a five-yard average per carry.

TABBED PLAYERS OF WEEK

Play Earns Dawson, Taylor Honor

NEW YORK (AP) — "I just threw the ball and thought someone might catch it," said Len Dawson—and Otis Taylor added: "You just never know when you'll have to make that kind of a catch in a game."

Dawson's tosses and Taylor's catches turned the tide for Kansas City in a 27-20 thriller, knocking off Washington's previously unbeaten Redskins and earning the two Chiefs co-honors Tuesday as The Associated Press Offensive Players of the Week in the National Football League.

The Kansas City tandem beat out Chicago Bears quarterback Bobby Douglass and the Miami Dolphins' running back duo of Larry Csonka and Jim Kiick.

The Dawson-to-Taylor act has been clicking with such deadly accuracy of late that the Chiefs have reeled off five straight victories to remain tied with Oakland in their annual two-way slugfest for supremacy in the American Conference West.

Sunday against the Skins, whose brilliant Over-the-Hill Gang had them leading the National Conference in defense, Dawson was limited to just one complete pass and minus seven yards as Washington built a 17-6 halftime lead.

But he was near-perfect the rest of the way, winding up with completions on 10 of 24 attempts for 203 yards and three touchdowns, two of them for 26 and 28 yards to Taylor, who finished the day with 115 yards on his five receptions.

In the second half I just came out throwing," said the 15-year veteran from Purdue, in his 10th season with the Chiefs. "We had to go after them, that's all."

The ball he "just threw" was the game winner, and he never saw where it landed, having been smeared to the turf by defensive end Verlon Biggs the instant he released the pass.

In the end zone, 28 yards away, Taylor was doing his bit.

Unitas' Last-Gasp Aerial Wouldn't Have Been Legal

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) — There are probably thousands of fans addicted to Monday night football who went yawning to sleep thinking the Baltimore Colts would have tied the Minnesota Vikings if Eddie Hinton had caught Johnny Unitas' last-minute pass.

But they'll have to wake up to the fact that the pass could not have resulted in a touchdown.

The reason for that is simple: Unitas' pass nicked the crossbar of the goal post and, under the rules, was a dead ball at precisely the instant pigskin came into contact with yellow metal.

Dragon, Knight, Bulldog Lasses Win On Court

Warren girls won a close game Tuesday, slipping by East Forest by just three points, 21-18, in girls basketball action.

Scoring all but three of Warren's points was Hallie Bunk, who connected for eight field goals and a pair of charity tosses. Top scorer for East Forest was Tam McDonald with 12.

Eisenhower girls more than tripled the score on Sheffield, taking an easy 21-6 decision. High point-getter was Debbie Bunk with eight points.

Jessie Blair collected three markers for Sheffield.

In other action, Tidewater streamlined over Youngsville 31-18, paced by Barb Knight's 16 points.

Warren 21, East Forest 18

Warren—Hallie Bunk, 6-2-18; Mary Brown, 0-1. Totals: 9-3.

East Forest—Tam McDonald, 5-2-12; Diane Hoover, 1-0-2; Theresa Bower, 1-0-2; Delores Riggs, 0-1-1; Sue Taylor, 0-1-1. Totals: 7-4-18.

Fighting Irish Coach Hopes For Rebound In Nat'l Polls

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Ara Parseghian of Notre Dame isn't throwing in the sponge yet on the chances of his Fighting Irish regaining the upper reaches of the national college football ratings.

Plummeted from sixth to 12th in The Associated Press poll after last Saturday's 28-14 stunning by Southern California, Notre Dame's hope for a lofty final rating "now is far more difficult," Parseghian told the Chicago Football Writers Tuesday by phone.

"But Nebraska No. 1, Oklahoma No. 2, Alabama No. 4, Auburn No. 5 and Georgia No. 7 all play one another along the line, and the results will influence the top ratings," said Parseghian.

Notre Dame 5-1 is host Saturday to Navy which owns a 2-7 record, including a resounding 15-14 upset of Duke last Saturday.

Asked if the Irish would try to run up a score against Navy to recoup in the poll, Parseghian blurted: "I just hope we can beat the Middies, who have played Michigan and Penn State and faced four opponents last Saturday.

If they can maintain this pace in the remaining games, they will become one of the few teams in history to make a sweep of these categories.

The powerful Sooners padded their lead in three attacking categories—total offense, team rushing and scoring—with their 75-28 triumph over Kansas State last Saturday.

If they can maintain this pace in the remaining games, they will become one of the few teams in history to make a sweep of these categories.

In rushing for 711 yards against Kansas State, breaking the previous mark by 66 yards, the Sooners boosted their rushing offense average to 486.7 yards a game—143.1 yards ahead of second place Alabama.

Even should Oklahoma be held to zero yardage in the next two games, Alabama would have to average 440.5 in its next two games to assume the No. 1 spot. Such an eventuality appears remote.

The Sooners' total offense average of 562.2 yards is ahead of the college record of 562.0 set by Houston in 1968.

The Oklahomans have a 47.7 average in scoring—5.2 yards above the nearest challenger, the all-time high of 237.

The standard revising sessions don't appear to be over yet with three regular season games remaining on the schedule. For example, the first time the Scots score a touchdown, they will set a new season scoring record. The Clansmen have tallied 233 points in only six outings, just four short of the all-time high of 237.

LBJ-Man Tag Hurried End Of Youngblood's Career

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rufus W. Youngblood was a guardian shadow to five presidents and an unforgettable hero at age 47, as the Secret Service's No. 2 man.

If you know who is shoving the spear in your back, you can grab him by the collar and hit him in the mouth. But a little innuendo here, a little there ... what the hell am I supposed to do?"

By Youngblood's account, his duties as deputy director were slowly rendered superfluous after President Nixon took office.

He makes it clear he holds Nixon blameless. "He's a real gentleman," said Youngblood. "All the presidents I've served have been good people. They don't cause you any trouble. It's these second- or third-string quarterbacks who come in and say 'Let's get rid of this guy because he was there with LBJ.'"

Youngblood said he was subjected to petty harassments and backbiting, apparently because Nixon aides considered him too closely identified with Lyndon Johnson when the Texan was president.

Youngblood's responsibilities included supervision of the White House detail and he still traveled some with the President. He could have stayed on in the $36,000 post, he said in his gentle Georgia drawl, "but I don't want to waste the taxpayers' money."

Youngblood was publicly decorated by the Treasury Department for exceptional service in protecting Johnson on the day that President John F. Kennedy was assassinated. Johnson said the agent's performance was "as brave an act as I have ever seen anyone perform."

When Lee Harvey Oswald opened fire on the presidential procession, Youngblood jumped into the vice president's car and threw himself on top of Johnson. When the motorcade reached the Dallas hospital, he guarded Johnson with drawn revolver and then, upon word of Kennedy's death, rushed him secretly to the presidential jet-liner.

Youngblood says he "sort of grew up" in the Johnson administration. But he insists his loyalties, in line with Secret Service tradition, always have been to the presidency itself, not any particular man.

Although Youngblood would reflect only upon his own case, other sources indicated that several more agents who made their mark in the Johnson administration have been shunted out of the covered White House assignment causing considerable, if guarded, dis-gruntlement in the ranks. They include Thomas L. Johns, who was bumped from assistant director to a post in Birmingham, Ala., and Clint Hill and Emory Roberts, both of whom earned high ratings for their actions during the Dallas tragedy.

The White House has declined comment on the assertions that politics have influenced Secret Service assignments.

Law And Order And Racism Will Pace Philly's Election

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Law and order and racism are major issues in Philadelphia's bitter battle for mayor next Tuesday in which a tough ex-cop, once considered an easy winner, now is hanging on to a narrowing lead over a businessman pledging reform in place of boss rule.

Frank L. Rizzo, 51, once rumored to be a possible successor to FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, quit as police commissioner to run as the Democratic organization choice.

Handpicked by Mayor James H. J. Tate who under law couldn't seek a third term, Rizzo survived a bruising four-way primary challenge to face Republican W. Thacher Longstreth, 50, a former city councilman, advertising man and executive director of the Chamber of Commerce.

Four minor party candidates, two of them women, are expected to have little impact on the outcome.

The namecalling campaign, expected to cost each side a record $1 million, has torn across party lines and disintegrated party labels in America's fourth largest city where Democrats have run the government uninterrupted for 20 years. The party came in on a wave of reform, ending 68 years of GOP control, and now the political situation is reversed.

The harsh oratory has instilled a mood of fear against crime and hate of police, and pitted white against black, poor against rich, young against old. Both candidates accused the other of racism, of trying to split the city.

Rizzo is fighting not only the Republicans, outnumbered nearly 2 to 1, but disenchanted independents and probably a majority of the normally-Democratic black community.

The feeling of the blacks is epitomized by Dr. Leon Sullivan, a Baptist minister, founder of the world-famous Opportunities Industrialization Center (OIC), and the only black on the General Motors Corp. board.

"Should Rizzo be elected we will unquestionably have... a city divided racially, ethnically and sectionally," Sullivan said in dropping his cloak of non-partisanship to make first political endorsement of his career. "Rizzo could not possibly bring this city together."

"It is clear that both Rizzo and Longstreth are for law and order, as we all are, but it is a question of law and order and progress under Longstreth, or law and order and terror under Rizzo."

Angered, Rizzo said Sullivan played "dirty pool." The minister was more harshly denounced by Democratic State Rep. Earl Vann, a black supporting Rizzo, who called him a part of "a sinister coalition of polarizers and fearmongers (who) have joined hands in a hate campaign."

The two Democratic mayors before Tate—Joseph S. Clark, later a U.S. Senator, and Richardson Dilworth who turned back Longstreth's first bid for the mayor's job in 1955—have endorsed Longstreth.

So have two of Rizzo's three primary opponents—one a former councilman and the other a black state representative—and two of the city's daily newspapers, the morning Inquirer and the afternoon Bulletin. Their editorials said there's a need for a change in government, and a mayor who will serve all the people.

More than anything else Rizzo is proud of his record as a cop. He admitted he was tough, but insisted he also was fair and impartial.

"I believe my record is crystal clear in this community that while I was police chief I served all the people of this city," Rizzo said. "The black, white, Puerto Rican community, people of all races and religions and all you have to do is check the record."

That record, though, has some smudges. One occurred 15 months ago in a raid on Black Panthers headquarters where his men stripped several blacks in a sidebar search. Another was in 1967 when Rizzo helped break up a demonstration of some 3,500 high school students, mostly black.

Charges of police brutality were leveled. Rizzo denied them.

All this has ruffled the confident but short-tempered Rizzo, a high school dropout who followed his immigrant father to the police force. He denounced the deserting politicians, and also the newspapers which had built him nationally as a sort of "super cop" during his four years as commissioner.

"The nation is watching this election to see if a police chief can make it as mayor," said Rizzo, predicting he'll win by at least 130,000 votes. There's only one other ex-cop now running an American city, and that's Charles Stenvig of Minneapolis.

Longstreth follows claim the Rizzo lead, if it ever was as big as he claims, has evaporated and that the GOP nominee, beaten by Dilworth by 133,000, will win this time by 40,000 or more.

Most observers give Rizzo an edge of perhaps 25,000 if around 75 per cent of the 966,084 of the

White House Hopefuls To Be At Demo Dinner

HARRISBURG (AP) — Four possible Democratic presidential nominees are scheduled to speak Wednesday night at the party's annual fund raising dinner in Pennsylvania.

Democratic State Committee officials said on Tuesday dinner has been ordered for 5,000 persons at the $100-a-plate meal at the Farm Show Building.

The possible presidential contenders listed as speakers are U.S. Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Me., George S. McGovern, D-S.D., and Fred R. Harris, D-Oklahoma.

Sen. Birch E. Bayh, D-Ind., had accepted the committee's invitation to the dinner but was not expected to attend because of his withdrawal from the nomination race. Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., declined invitations because of previous commitments.

Couple Dies In Flaming Holocaust

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A man and his wife were found burned to death in the ruins of their home in the city's Homewood section Tuesday, firemen said.

Authorities identified the victims as Robert C. Cunningham, 55, and his wife Helen, about 50.

The fire apparently broke out in the kitchen of the Cunningham home before dawn, firemen said, and spread to an adjoining home occupied by the Charles Dwyer family. The Dwyers managed to escape the flames.

The two homes were located just a few doors from the fire house.

Kurtzman Says Shapp Has Not Told Him He Is To Be Fired

HARRISBURG (AP) — Education Secretary David H. Kurtzman said Tuesday Gov. Shapp has not notified him of his pending ouster as state government's top educator.

But the 67-year-old Kurtzman added, "I don't want to hang around and force myself on him."

A number of reliable Capitol Hill sources, both in the legislature and the executive branch, have confirmed that Kurtzman will be replaced by John C. Pittenger. Pittenger, 41, is Shapp's legislative liaison, and a former House member who always took an interest in education.

An attorney and Harvard graduate, Pittenger also taught for a time at Franklin and Marshall College. The change is expected in early December. Shapp has made no public announcement of the switch.

Kurtzman, appointed to his current $30,000 a year position in September, 1967, said he had not planned to leave his job at this time.

"The governor asked me at the beginning of his administration if I would stay on," Kurtzman told the Associated Press in an interview. "I said if my health permitted it, I would be glad to give it a try. I would have stayed as long as he wanted me to."

The secretary said he had no conflicts or disagreements with Shapp, and supported the governor's plans to cut costs of school construction and prevent duplication in higher education programs. But he indicated some of the changes Shapp wants cannot take place overnight.

"Things don't change that quickly when you're dealing with three million children," Kurtzman said. "The governor's plans are not something you get accomplished tomorrow morning."

Kurtzman said he did not agree with Shapp, however, on one point: the governor's position that the department was loaded down with dead weight.

The department has some 1,300 employees, about half professional educators, the rest typists, clerks and other supporting personnel.

"I don't think we're overstaffed at all," Kurtzman said. "Many people are paid out of federal funds. In fact, we're understaffed in some areas. We could do more in guidance, special education and visits to colleges and universities."

Kurtzman said while Shapp is registered voters turn out. There are more than 600,000 Democrats.

The two Democratic mayors before Tate—Joseph S. Clark, later a U.S. Senator, and Richardson Dilworth who turned back Longstreth's first bid for the mayor's job in 1955—have endorsed Longstreth.

So have two of Rizzo's three primary opponents—one a former councilman and the other a black state representative—and two of the city's daily newspapers, the morning Inquirer and the afternoon Bulletin. Their editorials said there's a need for a change in government, and a mayor who will serve all the people.

More than anything else Rizzo is proud of his record as a cop. He admitted he was tough, but insisted he also was fair and impartial.

"I believe my record is crystal clear in this community that while I was police chief I served all the people of this city," Rizzo said. "The black, white, Puerto Rican community, people of all races and religions and all you have to do is check the record."

That record, though, has some smudges. One occurred 15 months ago in a raid on Black Panthers headquarters where his men stripped several blacks in a sidebar search. Another was in 1967 when Rizzo helped break up a demonstration of some 3,500 high school students, mostly black.

Charges of police brutality were leveled. Rizzo denied them.

All this has ruffled the confident but short-tempered Rizzo, a high school dropout who followed his immigrant father to the police force. He denounced the deserting politicians, and also the newspapers which had built him nationally as a sort of "super cop" during his four years as commissioner.

"The nation is watching this election to see if a police chief can make it as mayor," said Rizzo, predicting he'll win by at least 130,000 votes. There's only one other ex-cop now running an American city, and that's Charles Stenvig of Minneapolis.

Longstreth follows claim the Rizzo lead, if it ever was as big as he claims, has evaporated and that the GOP nominee, beaten by Dilworth by 133,000, will win this time by 40,000 or more.

Most observers give Rizzo an edge of perhaps 25,000 if around 75 per cent of the 966,084 of the other speakers include Gov. Shapp and Lt. Gov. Ernest P. Kline and Judges Louis Mandelino and Robert N.C. Nix Jr., the party's candidates for two State Supreme Court seats in next week's election.

An aide at state committee said speeches would be held to about five minutes with the exception of Shapp's.

Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel was invited as a guest Shapp, the aide said.

A $25-a-head cocktail party will precede the dinner, which is the state committee's chief fund raising function. This year's will be the first dinner held at the Farm Show Building since Lyndon B. Johnson ran for President.

The aide said the Farm Show Building was selected because it is the only one in the area large enough to accommodate the large turnout anticipated.

Last year's dinner drew about 2,000 persons, he said.

Marine Killed In Car-Truck Crash On US 22

EBENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A Somerset County man home on leave from the U.S. Marine Corps has been killed and another person injured seriously in a car-truck-trailer crash on U.S. 22 just west of here, state police report.

Troopers identified the victim Monday as John Joseph Foehl, 26, of Windber, driver of the car.

The truck driver, Donald Booterbaugh, 48, of Cresson, was reported in fair condition Tuesday in a Johnstown hospital.

Officers said the Foehl car apparently crossed the center line and struck the rig head-on.

Hard Coal Mining Here Fighting For Its Life

HARRISBURG (AP) — The nation's anthracite coal industry, confined to eastern Pennsylvania, is fighting for its life against federal mine laws.

A majority of small, deep-mine operators are reportedly forced out of business because of the 1969 Mine Health and Safety Act, the same law that many mine experts contend promotes danger rather than safety for the entire coal mining industry.

Mazie Gutshall, a special consultant to the U.S. Bureau of Mines and a former deputy mines secretary for Pennsylvania, told the Associated Press the very life of the anthracite industry is being threatened by the law.

"They just cannot comply with a law written mainly for the bituminous industry," she said. "I've heard that approximately two-thirds of the industry has closed or is on the verge of closing deep mines."

The law applies to both anthracite and bituminous deep mines. But it makes little distinction between the two industries that have separate problems of timbering, ventilation, lighting and mining methods.

For that reason, an Anthracite Advisory Committee was created a few weeks ago. The committee will review the 1969 law to determine needless requirements forced upon the anthracite industry and make recommendations for Congress to amend it, Mrs. Gutshall said.

There are eight committee members — four from anthracite management, two union leaders and a representative each from the Commonwealth and federal government. George Sterling, the state's anthracite mine

One Of Ten Junior High Kids Have Sampled Heroin, Doctor Says

HARRISBURG (AP) — One out of 10 junior high school students has sampled heroin, a statewide Health Department survey shows, and Pennsylvania's top drug adviser says narcotics use is increasing.

Dr. Catherine B. Hess, narcotics adviser to the Health Department, said at a seminar Tuesday that a subculture of drug usage is expanding with young people because of the lack of communication with adults.

"We are so busy cramming our moral values down our kids' throats that we don't listen to them," she said.

In addition to alienating younger people, Miss Hess said, adults set poor examples by drinking alcoholic beverages and using increasing amounts of chemicals, such as birth control pills and tranquilizers — in everyday life.

"I don't think we can continue to pill pop and drink excessively and say to our children, 'It's not for you,'" she added.

Dr. Henry Brill, director of the Pilgrim State Hospital at West Brentwood, N.Y., said statistical studies show that children from families where alcohol is consumed have a greater tendency to use drugs.

Brill called for a systematic approach to treating drug abuse which could be achieved through federal or state programs. But he added, "Basically the action has to be where the problem is and that means locally."

ed colleges. We have to decide in which areas they'll be autonomous, and when they'll be under complete control of the state."

Kurtzman said he has no specific future plans, but would take a part-time position at a university. He formerly was acting chancellor at the University of Pittsburgh, taught at Temple University, and was a researcher at the University of Pennsylvania.

"At the time Shapp's plans to replace Kurtzman came out in the news media, the educator was working on long-range plans in both basic and higher education.

"In basic education, we're establishing the intermediate units," he said. "In higher education, we need to establish our relationship with the state-owned

Republican Group Faces Macing Charge

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Detectives and lawyers, acting on a search warrant signed by Chief Justice John C. Bell of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, on Tuesday seized the financial records of the Delaware County Republican organization to investigate charges of macing.

The raid was directed by Richard A. Sprague, special prosecutor investigating alleged corruption in the public offices of the county for the sole benefit of the political party in power.

"As a result an atmosphere of intimidation and fear pervades the public offices of the heavily Republican county outside Philadelphia.

Sprague is the first assistant district attorney of Philadelphia county. He was appointed to head the special investigation by Delaware County Dist. Atty. Stephen McEwen.

Sprague, in a seven-page statement of probable cause, declared "there is throughout Delaware County a pattern of violations of the antimacing act."

Macing is the practice by which political partners or individuals force employees to pay a part of their salary as a condition of keeping the job.

There are about 3,000 employees on the Delaware County payroll, and sources reported the macing fee ran from one to seven per cent of gross annual salary. Thus if a person earned $10,000 he would have had to ante up anywhere from $100 to $700.

This Apple Pie Is In The Bag

by JO BETZ

One method I use for judging the success of a recipe is by giving it a "Request Quotient." The more my family asks for it, the higher RQ rating it gets.

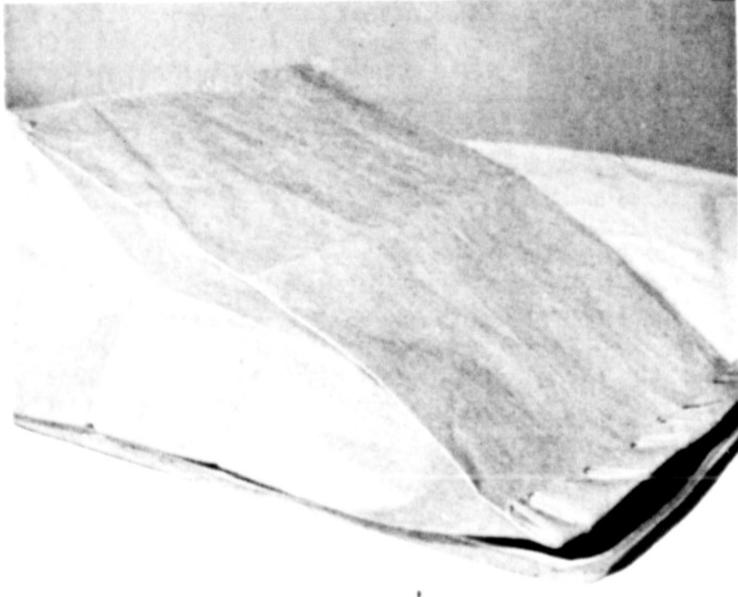

One recipe high on the list is for an apple pie -- but not just your average run-of-the-mill apple pie.

This one is cooked in a paper bag, and comes out of the oven juicy with a crumbly topping, browned to perfection in its paper bag covering.

No -- the paper bag has never caught fire, even though the pie is baked for an hour at 425 degrees. The bag is crisp after it's taken out of the oven, and a little browner than when you put it in, but stands the heat beautifully.

I'm sure there is a scientific explanation of why the pie cooks better inside the bag -- but I'm no scientist. The only thing I know is that my family loves the pie, and that's good enough for me.

Here's the recipe -- maybe your family will like it as much as mine.

JO'S PAPER BAG APPLE PIE

1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
About 2 1/2 pounds of pie apples
1 cup sugar for filling. Use 1 cup each of brown and white

2 tablespoons flour for filling
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons lemon juice, fresh or reconstituted
1 cup sugar for topping
1 cup flour for topping
1 cup butter or margarine

Make an unbaked 9-inch pastry shell using packaged piecrust mix or your own favorite recipe.

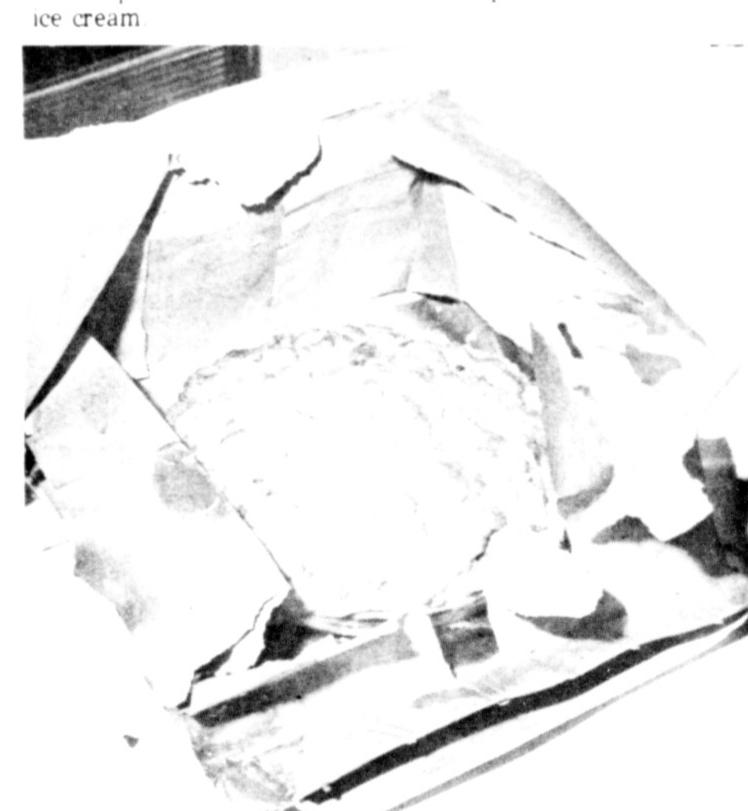

Pare core and quarter apples, then cut each quarter lengthwise and again crosswise to make chunks. You should have about 7 cups. Place in a large bowl.

Make the filling by combining 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, nutmeg and cinnamon, sprinkle over apples and toss to coat well. Spoon into the pastry shell and drizzle with lemon juice.

Combine 1/2 cup sugar and 1/2 cup flour for topping in a small bowl. Cut in butter or margarine. Sprinkle over apples to cover top.

Slide pie into a heavy brown paper bag large enough to cover pie loosely. Fold the open end over twice and fasten with paper clips. Place the bagged pie onto a large cooky sheet for easy handling.

Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for one hour. The apples will be tender and the top bubbly and golden. Split the bag open and remove pie. Cool on a wire rack, and serve plain or with cheese or ice cream.

A very hot oven, 450 degrees, should be used for roasting wild duck. Count on roasting the bird twenty minutes to the pound for rare, about thirty minutes to the pound for better done duck.

Bride's Cousin Performs Ceremony

Karen Louise Albaugh stood before her cousin, Father Norman Smith, when she became the bride of Dennis Lee Kramer in a noon ceremony held at St. Anthony's Church, Saybrook, October 2, 1971.

Mrs. Mary Valone played traditional wedding music for the double ring ceremony.

As the bride stood before an altar decorated with vases of white gladioli and white pompons, she was dressed in a floor length gown of silk organza over taffeta, with long fitted sleeves. The ruffles at her wrists and the bishop collar were trimmed with chantilly lace. The empire waist and A-line skirt of the gown were trimmed with matching lace appliques.

She wore a cathedral length veil of silk illusion edged with lace to match her gown, and carried a cascade bouquet of green fuji mums, tangerine carnations, white, yellow and butterscotch pompons, accented with green star flowers and ivy.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Albaugh, 22 W. Main st., Sheffield. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lynn D. Kramer, 107 N. Main st., Clarendon.

Helen Gerarde served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Judy Albaugh, a sister of the bride, and Joann Falbriksi. The attendants were dressed in gowns of a California print with autumn colors, and wore veils attached to orange Dion bows.

The two flower girls, Barbara Albaugh, a sister of the bride, and Wendy Sue Kramer, a sister of the bridegroom, were dressed in orange gowns, and wore butterfly veils attached to Dion bows.

The adult attendants carried arm bouquets of yellow, bronze, and butterscotch pompons and orange and green star flowers suspended on an orange velvet handle. The flower girls' bouquets were similar and suspended on white handles.

Steven Elmquist was chosen as best man. Ushers were Randy Kramer and Larry Kramer, both brothers of the bridegroom. Brucie Hartweg, a cousin of the bride, was ringbearer.

A reception for 250 guests was

Watch Your Hands --

They May Make You A Liar

Communicating with gestures began with the cave man, but recognizing the true meanings of gestures is something people have just begun to do, says Gerard I. Nierenberg, co-author of a book called "How To Read a Person Like a Book."

"People give off all kinds of non-verbal clues about what they're really thinking," Nierenberg states. "For instance, people don't like to lie and they practically tell you when they do it. One might put his hand over his mouth, cough or turn his body to the side."

Nierenberg says his book is the outgrowth of sessions he conducted on the art of negotiating. "We began doing video tapes of the sessions," he explains, "and people started recognizing the meanings of gestures--first the other persons then their own. And they began to understand how the right interpretation of gestures can help at communicating."

For instance, in a negotiating situation, Nierenberg distinguishes between two attitudes--open and closed. A person with an open attitude would sit on the front of a chair, lean forward on his toes and not have his arms closed. But a person with a closed attitude would sit back in his chair, feet flat on the floor and have locked arms.

"If you're getting the correct verbal feedback from those attitudes, you can avoid a stalemate in a discussion, or stop a person from getting angry," Nierenberg says. "If a person develops a closed attitude, you should change the subject or ask for clarification--'why are you acting this way?'--Do anything to change the situation."

The author says traditionally women have been better at interpreting gestures than men, calling their ability part of women's intuition. "It's being able to interpret minute gestures," he adds. As an example, Nierenberg cites the fact that women know they must walk a certain speed. "If she walks too fast, it's not ladylike, but if she walks too slow, she's leaving herself open for an invitation."

Just as languages differ, so do gestures, Nierenberg notes.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Would you do your readers a favor and print this letter? I am recovering from tuberculosis, which was detected early. I am in my mid-twenties and had never been sick before in my life. When the TB trailer was in our neighborhood, I was in a hurry but decided to take the few minutes. Those few minutes may have saved my life.

Many people still have old notions about TB. Would you please set them straight? In order to catch TB a person must be run down and susceptible. After a brief time on medication, the TB patient is not contagious. Also when a person has been declared well by his doctor, he is as capable a worker as he was before he became sick. Many people have written to tell me they are sorry about my illness and they hope someone will be kind and hire me. Please inform your readers that a person who has had TB is extremely health-conscious and will get regular medical check-ups which makes him a better employment risk than most people. Thanks a lot. — 100 per cent O.K.

DEAR O.K.: Bravo! Thanks for giving me the opportunity to get some vital information to 34 million readers.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married into a rather strange family. I told myself I was marrying Len, and not his relatives but these people are beginning to get to me. The thing I find most irritating is the way my mother-in-law makes such a point of how people LOOK.

I'm no beauty, but I wouldn't scare small children either. My mother-in-law never stops talking about how "beautiful" this one is and how "gorgeous" that one is. We went to a luncheon yesterday and on the way home she spoke endlessly about the women who were there. Didn't I think A was "plain"? B was "homely". C was "unattractive", D was "stunning", E was "magnificent". F was "a knockout". I was so depressed by the time I got home, I had a headache.

Please give me some advice on how to handle this. — UNHAPPY WITH MY LOOKS

DEAR UN: Interesting that the REAL problem showed up not in your letter but in your signature. One thing is certain, you are not going to change your mother-in-law, so you'd better change your attitude toward her. Make sure you look as good as you can in her presence — then forget it. The important thing is that you get along with her son — and to heck with the rest of it. It doesn't matter.

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze And You — For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Chain-Calls
Curb Crime
In Corry

CORRY—A warning to shoplifters, bogus money passers, short change artists and bad check writers.

The merchants of Corry have come up with a quick, effective defense against dishonest out-of-towners who try to practice their "skills" in local stores.

The protective device consists of a pre-arranged series of telephone calls which, within minutes, alerts Corry retailers to the presence of any transient suspected of swindling or stealing from local business establishments.

The simple yet unusual "chain-calling" plan is directed by the Corry Chamber of Commerce and is carried out by 80 member-businesses of the chamber's retail division. Telephone service in this town of 8,000 is provided by General Telephone Company.

According to Dennis Frushone, Chamber of Commerce manager, the telephone "Call Alert System" works this way:

When a business place finds it has been hit by fraud, a representative of the firm immediately places a telephone call to the Chamber of Commerce office. Frushone's office then calls the chairman of the retail division and the Corry Police Department. The chain-calling program is then immediately activated.

Frushone's office and the retail division chairman forge the first links in the chain by quickly calling two assigned businesses apiece. This sets up several parallel lines of telephone calls by which each establishment, in turn, passes the alert to another.

Within eight to 15 minutes all 80 retail division members know enough about the incident to be ready for the suspect if he enters their premises.

Frushone said the Call Alert System has been used about 50 times a year and has been highly successful in warning Corry businesses against a variety of dishonest practices.

One person, he said, attempted to cash a check in a local store right after a clerk received the alert that a bad check had been received by another retailer in town. When the check was presented to the clerk, she excused herself momentarily and called police who came and arrested the suspect on the spot.

The order for notifying the various business places was planned carefully when the system was established. Frushone said businesses with a high volume of transient trade are called first. A few minutes after the alert is initiated, Frushone makes several random calls to be sure that all retail-members have been notified.

Since the Chamber of Commerce office closes at night and on weekends, merchants can report incidents by calling Frushone at his home. He immediately puts the chain-calling plan into effect from there.

This occasion will permit residents of the Warren County area to visit the Warren Campus and to see firsthand the renovations which have been made to provide attractive and comfortable quarters for Warren Campus students and faculty.

Visiting dignitaries from Edinboro State College will be on hand on October 31 to meet with local citizens. Those persons who are coming from Edinboro will include Dr. Chester T. McNeer, President, Edinboro State College; Dr. James B. McKinley, Vice-President for Academic Affairs; Dr. John Yon, Vice-President for Student Affairs, and Dr. Robert Gates, Vice-President for Administrative Services. In addition, many of the academic deans and department heads have been invited.

The Warren Higher Education Corporation and the Student Government of Warren Campus are cooperating with other personnel of the college in a joint effort to make the event on October 31 an outstanding success. Various displays of the student organizations will be provided to show the public the variety of activities which takes place at the Warren Campus. Slides will be shown of both the historical development of the branch campus over a period of nine years together with "before" and "after" pictures of the new site. It is the hope and desire of the students, faculty, and administration of the Warren Campus to have as many people from the surrounding area as possible visit the Open-House and to show them what an asset they have in Higher Education in Warren County. The public is invited.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of A defensive mixup permitted South to scamper home unclothed with a vulnerable game contract in hearts. In order to defeat the contract, East and West must execute their campaign with exact precision. Failure by one player to take charge, at a time like this, can lead to disaster—as today's deal proves apt illustration.

West opened the queen of diamonds and when dummy came down with a singleton, East overtook with the king in order to make a play for his partner. The switch was to the deuce of clubs. Declarer played the king. West impulsively overtook with the ace and then—after a momentary pause, returned the jack.

South won the trick with the queen, drew trump with two pulls and then took the spade finesse, losing to East's king. At this point declarer claimed his contract, having lost three tricks—one spade, one diamond and one club.

The defense had some words at this point. East contended that his partner should have allowed South to hold the king of clubs when he played that card at trick two. West, on the other hand, said that East should have shifted to a higher spot card—either the nine or the seven, so that West would know that East did not have an honor in clubs.

It is true that the shift to a low card up to dummy's weakness does suggest that partner can return the suit, if he wins the trick. There was, in fact, little reason for East to return a low club. If West permits South to win the first club with the king, the latter will—no doubt—draw trump and then try the spade finesse. When this loses to East's king, the latter can now play another club and West will cash out two tricks in the suit to send South down to a one-trick setback.

Without the king of spades, East's return of a small club could not have cost. Holding the spade control, however, he should have made some positive attempt to steer the defense so that his partner could not make an error on the return.

Your Horoscope

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1971

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Fine Mars influences! You should have a most successful day. Especially favored: Banking, investments, consolidations, research, chemistry, medicine.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 20) — If there is little time for some matters, at least give what you can in carefully allotted segments. Be patient, flexible in thought and ideas.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Stellar influences mostly beneficial, but some opportunities may be hidden. It will take a little longer to achieve in certain areas, but don't worry. Just keep trying.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — You can accomplish much now, but planetary influences do not promise immediate results. Hold the line against misstatements, exaggeration, pretense.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Put everything in proper order, else day can become chaotic. There are many advantages for the seeking. Science and research slated for advancement.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Development of your top skills now will mean unusual gains later. Try harder for surer satisfaction. The effort alone will reward many times.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Disappointment? This should NOT stop you, rather make you determined to group forces for surer attainment next time. Make this day COUNT—in one way or another.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Best results will come from teamwork now. Confer, exchange ideas. Some adverse influences suggest caution, but NOT anxiety, in carrying out day's program.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — An auspicious day in which to make a colorful showing. Stress thrift and astute expenditures. General prudence and discretion will help make a good day better.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Make allowance for the errors of others to insure easier cooperation with co-workers, associates, family. Striving, bucking obstacles and serenity are requisites now.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — If pleasure-bent, shun risks, unwise entanglements. If busy at work, follow a system which will not overtax you. Easy does it!

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — You will find the "little" things rewarding now. Don't look for spectacular advancement. One simple secret is UNDERSTANDING. Be explicit, expressive and gentle.

YOU BORN TODAY have an understanding nature, an analytical mind, are driven by an idealistic motivating force. You are religious at heart yet may be highly unconventional and unorthodox in your behavior at times. Highly versatile, there are many fields in which you could succeed but, mostly notably, in art, literature and psychology; also in the law, the theater or as a top-flight business executive. You are strongly attracted to both music and poetry and may adopt either as an avocation. Birthdate of: Theodore Roosevelt, 26th Pres., U.S.A.; Dylan Thomas, Welsh poet.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

DUMPING SYNDROME:

B. J. writes: I've become a dumper since my ulcerous stomach was removed. Why are starchy foods taboo?

REPLY:

Following partial gastrectomy, certain foods dump rapidly from the remaining part of the stomach into the intestine. After eating, the individual complains of abdominal discomfort, fast pulse, weakness, and sweating. Carbohydrates tend to trigger the symptoms of the dumping syndrome. If the diet is high in proteins and fats and low in starches, there is less likelihood of developing symptoms.

CONVULSIONS IN CHILDREN

Mrs. E. F. writes: If a child develops convulsions whenever he has a fever, will he become epileptic?

REPLY:

Only time will tell. Our leaflet on convulsions can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

MEAT HATER

Mrs. N. writes: Can a 5-year-old who detests meat grow up normally?

REPLY:

Yes. By the time you read this, your youngster may be eating nothing but meat. After all, children of vegetarians never eat meat, yet they grow up normally. The likes and dislikes of children vary from month to month. If let alone, the majority soon learn to eat a balanced diet.
